TAPS 1986

Clemson University
Clemson, South Carolina
Volume 76

With the arrival of a new President, the installation of a digital phone system, the appointment of another Athletic Director, the emancipation of the football team, and the continuing upheaval of the downtown business district, transition quickly became a trend at Clemson. Everybody and everything seemed to be involved in change. Some changed for the better while others did not fare quite as well. And for some the more things changed, the more they stayed the same. Yes, Clemson seemed caught up in a wave of transition.

First and foremost was the change of leadership, twice in one year. President Bill Atchley resigned under a cloud of controversy in June 1985 to be replaced, temporarily, by Dean Walter T. Cox. In March 1986, after a search by the Board of Trustees, President Cox gave the reigns of power to Dr. Max Lennon, Dean of Agriculture at Ohio State.

After much confusion, the new Digital ESSX Telephone System went into effect this fall. Through many weeks of constant busy signals, dead dial tones, and getting phone calls for other numbers, all students now had the capability of using such options as call waiting, call forwarding, and automatic redialing.

There was also transition in the Athletic Department as Bobby Robinson succeeded Bill McClellan as Athletic Director. Robinson took over the position after McClellan resigned under the some controversy as Bill Atchley.

The first football game earmarked the freedom of the Fighting Tigers from a three year sentence of probation. The team was free at last to go to yet another bowl game. However, after a 6-5 season, the only consolations were a victory over arch-rival South Carolina and a trip to the Independence Bowl.

Once again, downtown Clemson underwent transformations. The Study Hall, which had closed last year, reopened its doors and then promptly reclosed — permanently. It has since reopened as The Street Corner Cafe. The Time Out Delicatessen closed and reopened as The Brothers

Deli. Clemson's only dance establishment, College Station, closed while Crazy Zack's opened on the corner of College Avenue and Highway 93, then went out of business at the beginning of spring semester. And finally, Strawberry's, the closest establishment to campus serving mixed drinks, was closed and then renamed Lester's.

One factor that may have contributed to these transitions was the change in the drinking age. One now had to be 20 to consume beer and wine, soon to be 21 for all alcohol.

Change and transition also involved the yearbook. TAPS is now entering its third quarter century and is now 576 pages, the largest ever. Incorporated are more graphics, over one hundred pages of color, exciting photography, and expanded sections for more coverage. TAPS also entered the computer age as three IBM PC XT's were added to the repertoire of equipment. Through all of the transitions this year, TAPS 1986 promises to be a yearbook extravaganza.

Along mid-March, the sun rose above East Campus changing life's color spectrum. Skin tones changed from pink to bronze, clothes from earthtones to pastels, and spirits from cool to warm.

Out of this metamorphosis of the season grew a rainbow of different attitudes and activities. Motivation to study became determination for relaxation. Beaches replaced libraries; road trips emptied labs; and intramural fields drained computer rooms.

When the term reached an end some students remained for summer school and shared the campus with high school camp students. Daylight hours were often spent on campus and town renovations and repairs. Sidewalks in front of the University Union and flooring by the bookstore were refinished. Construction of the chemistry building progressed and Tillman was supplied with a new bell system. Meanwhile, the downtown re-evaluated its offerings and Time-Out, a deli and bar replaced Alley Tavern, the Study Hall returned, and a Greek deli prepared its opening at

TRIVIA CLEMSON

A New Rage

Ironically, the impact of America's interest in trivia has been anything but insignificant or trifling as the word suggests. From the first edition of the game Trivial Pursuit, the fascination spread among different groups and grew to encompass many subjects. Trivia games can be found to test skills with people, places, movies, entertainment and, within the near future, Clemson.

The extent of this fad was impossible to determine. Besides the Horn Abbot series, Trivial Pursuit, which includes editions such as Baby Boomer, Genius I and II, Master, Junior, Sports, and Music, many other companies have published games on specific interests. Ripley's Believe It or Not Trivia, Palmetto Trivia, and six varieties of Bible trivia were made available. Several television shows were the subject of some versions of the game including Entertainment Tonight and MASH. Other publishers participated in this quest for knowledge as People, TV Guide, Time and Sports Illustrated presented their editions. As a matter of fact, most every magazine publication directed some attention to America's new pastime. And then there were the satirical ones: Mad Magazine's "attempt to cash in on the craze", Idiots Pursuit, Raunchy Trivia, and Vices. Obviously, if trivia was the subject for entertainment, the choice was endless. Since trivia is overabundant, there is bound to be a wide variety of questions on Clemson University. Therefore, we, the TAPS staff, challenge you to answer these questions:

What was the first women's dormitory? What did A. Wolfe Davidson do for Clemson University and why? What is on the site of the old stockade which housed the convict laborers who did work on Tillman Hall? What would have been the result if the construction of Lake Hartwell reservoir had proceeded according to original plans? What is the average number of hours a TAPS section editor spends in the office on a deadline weekend? What building served as the main campus library for many years?

What has always been a source of fascination for people everywhere became America's favorite pastime. Families, friends, and organizations could quench a common thirst for knowledge with an endless variety of trivial pursuit games, many tailored to the group's specific interest. For the curious, the answers to the aforementioned are respectively: Mauldin Hall; A. Wolfe Davidson, a Russian native, built the statue of Thomas Green Clemson for payment of his college expenses; the reflection pond; rising waters would have filled Memorial Stadium to the twenty-seventh row; forty-five hours; and Sikes Hall. One final question: why doesn't this article have a conclusion?

FROG WILD

Charades Keep Clemson Hopping

"Up in the air! It's a bird! It's a plane! No! It's Superfrog!" Actually, the frog was the creation of roommates imagination and entertained many more roommates with its weekly escapades. Throughout the fall semester, the frog and his brother, another homemade frog, performed many feats and gained a sizable following of students.

Housed in C410 Johnstone, the frogs were a grandmother's gift to B.J. Blackburn. He and his roommate Ricky Sill designed several scenes using the frogs as the main characters. First came Frog Vice, taken from the currently popular Miami Vice. Later came Superfrog, able to hop subcompacts in a single hop. Superfrog hopped his way to stardom in "Spring for Sight." And, not to be outdone, Superfrog participated in Twister Blister to help fight Multiple Sclerosis. The frogs celebrated the holidays in traditional ways: for Thanksgiving, one frog became a turkey, while his partner was an axe-wielding pilgrim, preparing for dinner — for Christmas, Santa Frog and Reindeer Frog appeared in the Johnstone window.

However, what provided entertainment for a semester was abrubtly ended when Superfrog was the victim of a "frognapping," a crime yet to be solved. During exam week, the stealing of the frog deprived the students of the ingenius creations of the Johnstone residents. With Blackburn's grandmother making another frog, more holidays, seasons, and vacations were celebrated with the imagination of Ricky Sill, whose roommate left for a co-op assignment. And when classes became almost too much, students in passing were cheered by the sight of the C410 Johnstone charades.

FIRST FRIDAY

CBS's "Eye" on the Tigers

The weekend beginning Friday, September 8, 1985 was no ordinary weekend. Besides the usual floats and pep rally, this 15th annual First Friday Parade and related festivities featured an outdoor concert by The Producers and The Heartfixers; and CBS was there to capture it all.

Sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, the traditional First Friday Parade includes twenty-five floats and is accompanied by the marching band. Basketball coach, Cliff Ellis was the grand marshal; CBS's top broadcasting duo, Brent Musburger and Ara Parsegian were two of the crowd's favorites. Each of these presented a paw-painted cheek despite Parsegian's Notre Dame alliance. During the halftime of the nationally televised Clemson-Georgia game, the parade was shown to the eighteen million people watching.

Noise from the pep rally radiated from the amphitheater across the campus; later that night, the shouts of the 5,000 — 7,000 crowd gathered at the outdoor concert vibrated throughout the town. Sponsored by the Central Dance and Concert Committee and the Student Union, The Producers and The Heartfixers entertained in the first outdoor concert in Clemson's history.

Traditionally, the parade is held on the eve of the first home football game, and although the game was not victorious for the Tigers who had just been released from a three-year probationary period, the soccer team ended the weekend with a 2-0 victory over Duke University.

The momentum of spirit brought another successful First Friday. Various clubs, fraternities, and sororities proved their loyalty to a unified student body. Appreciation went to CBS, whose "eye" on the Tigers highlighted the admirable spirit of Clemson for the world to see.

THE PRODUCERS

By the end of the First Friday Parade and the pep rally, even the buildings around the amphitheater were rocking. Or at least vibrating in reaction to Clemson's first outdoor concert, a free performance by The Producers with opening act, The Heartfixers.

Blankets and coolers provided comfort, the bands, entertainment. "What's He Got" and "She Sheila" were well received with much of the other material written and arranged by various members of The Producers. By 9:45, there was standing room only.

Although many students were not familiar with The Producers, the Atlanta-based band has earned a name in the Caribbean. In addition, video performances led this band to an appearance with Duran Duran and A Flock of Seagulls on the First Annual MTV New Year's Eve Show in New York. Instrumentals by The Heartfixers and powerful arrangements of The Producers entertained Clemson students until midnight.

Although musically the performance was a success, atmosphere contributed much to the crowd's delight. Campus provided a nice setting, and the students were excellent hosts. Overall spirit seemed to express a desire to see this type of celebration continued on an annual basis.

HEAD FOR THE HILLS!!!

It's Not the Alps But It Will Do

As the temperature dropped below the freezing mark the skis came out. Everywhere you looked people were bundled up ready to make the trek to the mountains. Whether they were going to Ski Beech or Sapphire Valley only one thought occurred. Where is the snow? The first days of the spring semester, when the only thing to do was register and dread the semester to come, those who did not get their fill of skiing over the holidays or spent it in warmer climates decided to hit the slopes.

Those who were up for a road trip, great snow, and spending a little more money usually headed for Ski Beech, Sugar Mountain, or one of the other slopes of the North Carolina and Tennessee mountains. Some did not mind a little ice, and liked the bargain at Sapphire Valley so they packed the car with skis and something to keep them warm on the slopes. The Student Union offered trips to Ober Gatlinburg for a set fee. Even though the southeast was not known for the best skiing in the world, there was enough for all kinds of skiers, from the beginner to the advanced.

Ski Beech

Four miles north of the town of Banner Elk, the resort of Ski Beech boasted fourteen slopes ranging from beginner to expert. Five double chairlifts, and J-bars took the bravest of skiers to the 809 foot vertical drop. Though it took four hours of driving to get there from Clemson many skiers found the trip well worth it. As it was higher in the mountains than (above) An unidentified skier flies over the tip of a mogul.

Vern Verna

Vern Verna

closer slopes there was more snow and less ice.

Sugar Mountain

Not far from Ski Beech you found Sugar Mountain. With twelve slopes, including the infamous Tom Terrific, this resort could accommodate the beginner and the expert. As a neighbor to Ski Beech, Sugar Mountain received the same amount of snow and had the same season. This was also a great place for night skiers.

Hawksnest

About 170 miles from Greenville, between Banner Elk and Boone North Carolina was Hawksnest. As under the old name of Seven Devils there were five slopes, two of which were advanced, to challenge the skier. While the beginners used a tow rope, the intermediate and advance skiers took one of the two lifts to the top of the 820 foot elevation change. On highway 105, this slope was a little smaller than its counterparts further down the mountain. Hawksnest was only open Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday for night skiing.

Appalachian Ski Mountain

North of the town of Blowing Rock, North Carolina on highway 321 was Appalachian Ski Mountain. With nine slopes, this resort was also on the small side. The advanced slope was 2000 feet by 365 feet. When mother nature needed a hand with the snow they had snow machines to make the skiing great. Appalachian Ski Mountain also offered night skiing.

Vern Verna

Mike Morga

(above) It isn't how many times you fall, it is how many times you get up as Jeff Creer demonstrates.

Mill Ridge

Once the skier got to Boone, Banner Elk, or Blowing Rock, Mill Ridge was not far away. Mill Ridge had five slopes, with advanced and beginner levels. The 225 foot drop may have made the beginner cringe, but for the more advaned it was no problem. It seemed that night skiing was a favorite with all the North Carolina ski slopes. Since the weather could be tempermental, snow could be made when needed.

Ober Gatlinburg

Over into Tennessee in the mountain town of Gatlinburg was a beautiful ski resort. Though small with only four slopes, two of them were advanced. The four hours drive from Clemson may not have seemed worth it for the skiing, but the beauty of the town and the mountains made it well worth the trip.

Cataloochee Ski Area

Cataloochee Ski area was in Maggie Valley, North Carolina, just 105 miles from Greenville. There were eight slopes to chose from, with two advanced for the more brave skier. After taking the lift to the top there was approximately a 750 foot elevation change on the way down. With night skiing on Wednesday and Friday night the skier had to watch out for the snow making machines, if the weather was cold enough. Though it did not have as good a reputation for snow, the shorter lift lines had a tendency to draw the skier.

Wolf Laurel

In Mars Hill, North Carolina, Wolf Laurel was located off highway 23 about two hours from Greenville. Though the ten slopes had a tendency to get icy in the sun, night skiing was excellent when the weather allowed the snow making machines to work. The two expert slopes gave a challenge to experienced skiers, while the more intermediate skiers were on seven slopes. The beginner skiers had a slope with a tow rope. Their courage was tested by the fact that they were not allowed to have poles on the beginner slope.

Sapphire Valley

For a quick road trip and one day of skiing, Sapphire Valley was the (below) A map of Southeastern ski areas with respect to Clemson.

(right) Even on a crowded day, the lift lines at Ober Gatlinburg are not very long.

All photos by Vern Verna best place to go. It was only a forty-five minute drive from Clemson. When the weather was cold and the snow recent, its four slopes were good skiing. Sometimes ice could be a problem when the weather got warm during the day and refroze at night. Because of the proximity to Clemson and the low prices for skiing lift lines could get long. They skied every night except Sunday, and made snow when the weather permitted.

Scaly Mountain

This resort was founded when the popular Sky Valley went private. Started by Jim Montieth, Scaly Mountain with its four slopes, was a great place for a beginner to start. Only two hours from Clemson, on highway 94 past Highlands, North Carolina, it was popular with many students. The one chair lift took the skier to the top of the 200 foot elevation. There was a tow rope for those who could not make it on the lift. The night skiing was good although the skier had to watch for ice patches on really cold nights.

Beginners as well as experienced skiers took off for the mountains without reservations, well not totally. As one beginner, Amy Thruston, remarked, "Even with the aches and pains associated with one's first ski trip, I think everyone should give the sport a chance." Though the fall semester was filled with football every weekend and the spring semester looked pretty dim, the one bright spot for those who put slats on their feet and flew down a hill with the greatest of ease was that one statement: Head for the Hills!!!

HOMECOMING

Color dominated the scene of Homecoming Weekend 1985. From the paper of the floats to the evening gowns of the pageant, from the color of the fireworks to the spotlights on guest Sting, color was abundant. And on Saturday Tiger orange dominated (Clemson 27 — Virginia 24)!

With limited time and limited budgets, fraternities, sororities, and organizations struggled to created the winning Homecoming display. DEAN WALTER COX

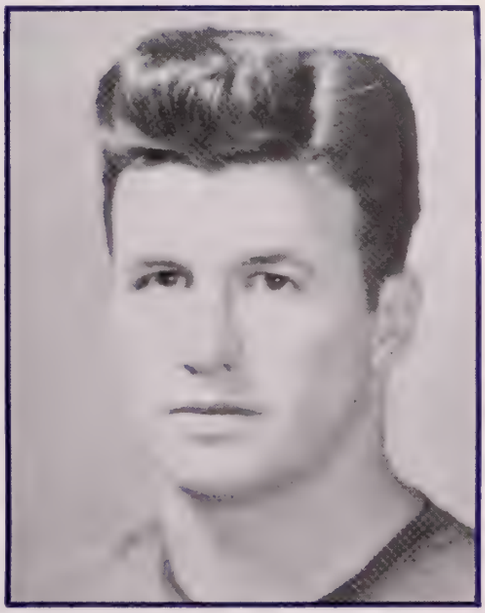
As a junior in 1938, Walter Cox was among 450 other students at the military college.

Active in several organizations, Cox graduated in General Science.



A 175 pound guard and a member of Block-C club, Cox's loyalty was evident at an early stage.

During his education at Clemson, Walter Cox was popularity called "Puss."

In 1935, Walter Thompson Cox, Jr. entered Clemson University among four hundred fifty other "rats." After the usual freshman initiation the army took over and transformed these boys into attentive, neat, disciplined young men. They were soldiers. Cox was a member of the first battallion.

By 1938, Cox was listed as a general science major here at Clemson and had taken up the sport of football. He was a one hundred seventy-five pound guard on the Varsity squad. The team did as well then as now earning first place in the state for the season.

In his senior year, 1939, Walter T. Cox, Jr., nicknamed "Puss," of Belton, SC, graduated from Clemson University with a B.S. degree in General Science. Throughout his years at Clemson, Cox had served as Private, Corporal, Supply Sergeant, Executive Lieutenant, and played Freshman Football and Varsity his remaining years. Cox was a member of Sigma Phi for four years and held the office of President his senior year. Also in his senior year, he was a member of the Block "C" Club, and attended R.O.T.C. camp in Fort McClellan, Alabama.

When, as a senior, Cox graduated from Clemson, his services here were far from over. In 1940, Cox was invited back to play for Clemson in the Cotton Bowl. He then became an assistant football coach for the athletic department. During this time period World War II was hitting the South pretty hard and Cox was called to active duty. In 1943 he returned to Clemson as an assistant in boxing and baseball doing odd jobs in the athletic department. Continuing to serve Clemson loyaly, Cox's efforts were rewarded when Poole appointed him assistant to the President of Student Life. In 1955, with an approximate enrollment of 3000 students he helped to organize Clemson's basic foundation into its present state. The University was given four divisions: Academics, Business, Student Affairs, and Institutional Advancement. In 1960 women were permitted approved entrance and the strict military rules were dropped. Women had been granted entry since 1955, however, it was not looked upon in a good light. At first, there was still not a great response to this admission, but by 1963 Mauldin Hall was built for their residence. Cox was then appointed the first Dean of Women, and eventually Vice-President of Student Affairs. Student Life is in charge of all activities outside of the classroom. This includes the Health center, the Cooperative Education System, athletics etc. Cox held this office until July 1985, when he took over as acting President for Bill Atchley after his resignation. Since taking over the Presidency, Dr. Cox believes that he has brought the leadership of the University back together once again. NCAA rules were established in football and he says he feels comfortable with the leadership he has designated in the Athletic Association. He also feels that he has reunited the Board of Trustees.

When questioned as to the University's standpoint in Academics, Cox replied that Clemson has at this point, as it always had, an outstanding academic quality. This quality is steadily increasing due to the University's evergrowing popularity. Dr. Cox commented that one bonus of the university is expansion . . . a second is its lack of expansion. Clemson has grown in size over time, however there is a limit each year as to the number of students we can and will admit. Since the University is becoming more popular, all over the country, the same number of students are still admitted each year. This allows the University to choose the fewest and best each year. Now as President, Dr. Cox is responsible for providing the leadership and financial resources for these elite students.

Dr. Cox describes his services here at Clemson as "a happy experience." He has seen fifty-one of the ninety-two years of the University's operation, and a large percentage of its students. Cox sees Clemson students as being unique. They are, for the most part, honest, hard-working, and efficient. They study hard, play hard, and perform well, but at the same time expect to earn their way up the ladder. In the job world, they ask to learn and thus make significant contributions to their work. This is a highly admired quality described by many employers of Clemson graduates. This is a quality gained largely from the spirit on the Clemson campus. In Clemson's early years of the military, outside activities of the students were limited. Leisure time was designed by the university coordinators to include a breadth of activities that were beneficial to the physical and mental welfare and development of the students. After the strict military rules were dropped, other activities were developed. Everything at the University encourages student participation, which in turn encourages leadership. Since students spend a great deal of effort is taken by the university to make dorm life a pleasurable experience. For most students, their college life is their first permanent stay away from home; at the same time it is a great learning experience. Students are all taught to get along with others in a working atmosphere. These are the most significant years in one's life. The experiences gained here form a basis for thoughts and actions to be used as an emphasis throughout one's career days. Dr. Cox, as the executive officer of the University, is terribly concerned with the wellrounding of the students' college experience. His goal in designing the foundation for their education is to provide an environment where they can grow and mature to their fullest extents. "Students are products of their environments . . . here at Clemson we hope to provide a place students will be proud to call home and will want to come back to."

In the spring of 1984, Dr. Cox received from Clemson the Gold Medallion award. This is the highest non-academic honor given by the University. He has made many public appearances, such as the First Friday Parades. He has represented Clemson in many public appearances, speeches; his loyalty and dedication to the University follow him. Dr. Cox, in all his years of service to Clemson, has welcomed many new faces and sent many old ones on the road to prosperous careers. He always has a friendly smile and an open ear for problems. His time has been our time and we should recognize his efforts. For all he's done for us and in hopes to recognize future services as well, let us all take just a moment to realize all he's done. Join the 1986 TAPS staff in saluting DEAN WALTER T. COX.

INTERNATIONAL WEEK

A Sharing of Cultures

In the sixties and seventies, there were just a handful of International students in Clemson. No cultural exchange or interaction took place and these students remained an isolated and indifferent group. The international students have become one of the largest groups of students on campus. At least eighty countries were represented with one out of every twenty students being from another country.

In an attempt to increase the interaction among students, the International Student Association held what was called International Week. Each day of the week featured a different area of the world. The week began with "Africa Day" with a wide display of posters, costumes, and artifacts from the continent of Africa. Students reported that it was soothing to hear the rhythm and beat of the African music as they passsed through the loggia. The "Far East Day" offered students to have their names painted in Chinese. Slides were also a part of their presentation. The "Scandinavian and Mediterranean day" featured an exquisite handwoven Turkish costume modeled by student Sinan Anadol. Some students were fortunate enough to receive a Turkish charm in the form of a plastic eyeball set in a metal setting that was believed by some Turkish people to ward off danger. The Americas display gave a good cross-sectional view of the Latin American countries as well as the United States. A final exhibit was the "Subcontinent of India Day" which featured Gandhi on the big screen television in the loggia. The display highlighted not only the cutural aspect but also the technological developments of India, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka.

The climax of the week was the International Cultural Festival and Dinner. Over 400 students participated including people from Atlanta, Columbia and Greenville. Thirty five dishes from across the globe were offered including Beef Stroganoff, Chinese Wanton and Indian Biryani. Cultural presentations from Bolivia, China, India and other countries provided entertainment. According to many the Middle eastern belly dancer stole the show with its authentic, original flavor. The evening ended with the Indian "Garbah" dance with the crowd participating.

Active participation of International students made the week a success. The International Week brought unity in an interesting and fun way, and students hoped that it would become an annual event.

Spirit Blitz

A Case of Dampened Spirits

Beth Kicklighter

The second annual Spirit Blitz was designed as a week of events climaxing in "The World's LARGEST Pep Rally." The game week events were a Dorm Window Decoration Contest and a Banner Contest. The pep rally included guest appearances by the Budweiser Clydesdales, the U.S. Army Golden Knights Paratroopers, the Varsity and Junior Varsity Cheerleaders, the 4:30 Thursday Singers, the Rally Cats, and Tiger Band.

A visual display during the kickoff used plastic orange and white shakers in the lower decks. The event was broadcast over Russ Castle's Tiger Tailgate Show on WFBC-FM with

At the pep rally, the audience participated in cheers which included: Orange and White, C-L-E-M in Cadence Count, and the spelling of Clemson around the stadium. The pep rally began at 1:00 and the game began at 2:30, two and a half hours after the usual time.

Dampened Spirits

Along with the damp weather came many bright orange ponchos, nearly the same color as the orange shaker sticks. This and the fact that the shakers didn't fluff up properly because of the moisture made for a disappointing visual display. Because of an extremely low cloud ceiling the Golden Knights were not able to jump. As a result, the balloon launching was changed to its regular time at opening kickoff.

Although the pep rally was a success as far as numbers, this may have been due to people showing up for the game and not necessarily being interested in participating in this record breaking event. There was much cheering and eulogizing of the Tigers but the main fare was one of song and dance. Although big in numbers, the "World's Largest Pep Rally" was not quite as big on spirit as the name might suggest. The enthusiasm was more like "Knee Deep in the Hoopla" as described by the Starship album title.

Before Spirit Blitz last year the Tigers had just beaten North Carolina and were on a winning streak, but this year the Tigers had just lost to UNC in the last minutes of the game and had fewer wins to their credit. Last year the Spirit Blitz was a success, this year it was less enthusiastic. Is Spirit Blitz's success so strongly related to the success of the football team because of fair weather fans?

TWISTER BLISTER

Awaiting instructions, students anticipate an exciting match.

Apathetic described the participation in Twister Blister. In an effort to break Georgia Tech's record and to raise funds in competition with the University of South Carolina, Central Spirit hoped to involve 2600 students in a Twister game.

After one postponement, only 1000 plus students trekked down to the practice fields to try their luck (and show their spirit). Granted, no time is going to be convenient for all and organization and promotion may not have been perfected, yet, somehow the lack of participation make a statement on the unity of the student body. Or is it that the spirit is proportional only to the success of the football season?

Continuing for about three hours, students twisted and tangled until all but fifty were eliminated. Because of time limitations, winners were chosen from the remaining participants by a process of drawing names. Prizes were reasonable, even generous. Surprisingly enough, these monetary prizes were not enough incentive for the unresponsive student body. As a fund-raiser, Twister Blister had great potential. Poor organization and poor promotion may have caused the event to miss its mark, or perhaps the Clemson spirit was over-estimated. At any rate, the record may not have been broken, but the contributions resulting were worthwhile to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

A Disappointing Turn of Events

KENNY ROGERS AND DOLLY PARTON

Bill Spitzer

Two nights, two stars, and energized talent. The evenings of February 23rd and 24th blasted off with performances by Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton with Star Search talent winners, Sawyer Brown, as the opening act. Jokes, talent and energy propelled the crowd, of young and old, country and pop fans, into an upbeat, excited response.

The mood was set with a message from Sawyer Brown — We'd like to thank Kenny and Dolly for ending our show tonight!" Updated clothes like pink and green tennis shoes, and jazzed up tunes including "Smoking in the Rockies" from their debut album and "Your Cheating Heart" a Hank Williams' Senior hit, convinced the crowd that the young band earned its welcome at Clemson. And when the stars are as well received as Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton, a fantastic opening act does not even steal the show.

The fans practically counted down for the arrival of Kenny and Dolly. The well known cowboy image as the first to entertain, with songs including "Lady", "Lucille" and other popular hits. Personality demanded the spotlight as Dolly mimicked Kenny's singing and, of course, Kenny retaliated with comments on the proverbial figure of Dolly. Some of Dolly's music was not particularly humorous, however, as she sang a tribute to her mother with "Coat of Many Colors" and thoughts on her childhood were voiced. One disappointing note was that the two stars actually sang very little together, one exception being the closing with "Islands in the Stream."

The concert became entertainment in both a musical sense and a comical one. The stars became themselves for the receptive audience. Two nights, two stars, — entertainment.

HANK WILLIAMS, JR.

Little ones, big ones, eensy teensy tiny ones, they all came; from the loudest of punk rockers to the rowdiest of cowboys, fans came young and old to see Hank Williams, Jr. in concert at Littlejohn Colliseum on October 5, 1985.

Lacy J. Dalton made an impressive opening for the many Hank fans and got them rocking to a good country beat. A short introduction from the Bama Band brought Hank out on stage to start real southern show. He opened with the alltime favorite, "All My Rowdy Friends all coming over Tonight. He received a major response to the chorus lines "Do Ya Wanna Party."

His concert featured mainly the songs from his 1984 album release Major Move. These included the hit single "Attitude Adjustment" and "Whiskey Bent and Hell Bound". "A Country Boy Can Survive", and my favorite, "If heaven ain't a lot like Dixie."

Hank gave all his rowdy friends a break and everyone chilled out as he told his story performed. This setup of blues and medleys were, like Hank's other songs, related to the good old southern traditions. He demonstrated his broad ability with other instruments playing the fiddle, the bango, the bass and steel guitars, the harp and the piano.

This highly talented artist began with his first professional and performance at the age of eight. Under the influence of his father, he too come to add a great deal of popularity to the American Country Music World.

The Bama Band came back in to assist him in one of his father's greatest hits, "Your Cheatin' Heart." The crowd picked up and once again started singing along to their favorite songs. Hank closed with several encores of "Family Tradition" in which he and the crowd alternately sang verses and the chorus — however — the show ain't over til the fat lady sings, or in this case until the fat man dances. Hank and the Bama Band invited everyone, including his bodyguard, to jam with him in the instrumental "Caligia."

STING

"Too hot" that was the phrase echoed by many women after seeing Sting perform on October 12 as the Homecoming Event of the century. As part of "The Dream of the Blue Turtles World Tour", most of the material he performed came from his first solo album.

Sting opened with the jazzy tune "Shadows in the Rain" which caused the crowd to get on their feet and dance in the aisles. Then the mood changed from upbeat to mellow as he sang "After Today Consider Me Gone" and "Children's Crusade". The mood picked up again when he tore into "Fortress of Your Heart." The audience to roar with its approval. The drummer, Omar Hakim, stole the limelight many times that night as he played like a man possessed.

After Sting left the stage, the audience yelled and screamed for an encore. He came out again and serenaded the audience with his unforgettable hit song, Roxanne. As he sang, it was as if his voice hypnotized the audience. The crowd began to sing in perfect unison with Sting. That was the climax of the whole concert.

One night Sting had a dream — a dream about blue turtles. He realized that it was a symbol telling him that it was time to leave The Police and search for his own identity. One stop of his first tour as a solo performer will be thought of as the Homecoming Event of the Century.

JOHN COUGAR MELLENCAMP

Although the preparation for the concert did not go smoothly, John Cougar Mellencamp's performance at Littlejohn Coliseum on March 1, 1985 lasted for three hours, after John Cougar had had very little time to practice — the stage took more time to set up than was anticipated. From start to finish, the performer impressed his audience with his endless energy and his sincere message brought forth in his songs and conversation.

After parting the curtains of his rather large stage, John Cougar Mellencamp appropriately opened the concert with "Small Town." The major portion of his performance was taken from his popular songs: "Jack and Diane" and "Hurt So Good" being two of those. Other songs featured were from the new album "Scarecrow".

John Cougar Mellencamp asked that four thousand fans write to South Carolina congressmen to inquire about their plans for the future of the small, independent farmers in the state. He prompted his request with statistics on the small farmers of the area and throughout the United States, how often they failed and how much the fans' support would help.

With the main part of the concert consisting of his own work, John Cougar comprised his encore of the works of others. The first song was of the sixties, another being a James Brown hit. The encore was brought to an exhilarating conclusion with "Under the Boardwalk."

John Cougar Mellencamp's performance brought entertainment to the crowd and a special plea for farmers across the United States. Through his directed lyrics and general conversation with his audience, John Cougar Mellencamp was able to delight his fans and make progress on a personal project.

SHADOWFAX

Sometimes billed as a contemporary jazz band, Shadowfax has created an image and sound too original to be labelled at all. With roots of Chicago blues, the band overlaps unique sounds of percussion associated with various cultures to produce a style that can only be termed as sensual and emotional.

The band's second performance in Clemson this November was acknowledged by a near capacity crowd. Selections included music from the albums Shadowfax, Shadowdance, and the Dreams of Children along with some arrangements from a forthcoming album. With the distinctive sounds of African, Asian and Indian flavor, the band withdrew an enthusiastic response from the audience. A typical reaction was that of Gene Sides who exclaimed; "I loved it! I'd never been to a jazz concert before and I loved it. They were great." The demanded encore focused on Chicago blues, another choice from their wide background.

From their use of unique instruments — the mandolin, lyricon, gongs, and chimes — to the exciting interplay between the electric guitar and the violin, Shadowfax has made their reputation — one of originality developing from their great command of percussion. Their Clemson audience has grown and the university can expect to host Shadowfax again to the delight of many.

ROCKIN' THE NIGHT

Union Pub Becomes Concert Hall

The hard rockin' nights of winter stretched into steamy nights of passion during the spring 1986 semester at Clemson University. There was a change taking place at this institution. No longer were the weekends dull because Clemson University was ROCKIN'!

Thursday night 10:01PM, everyone checks their look in the mirror: the girls comb their hair and the boys try to look so tough. They came for the music, to EDGAR'S. EDGARS Niteclub exploded with the best bands in the Southeast, sponsored by the Central Dance and Concert Committee of the University Union.

The Hearfixers kicked off the semester in grand style, playing to conservative packed houses the kind of blues that will heal anyone's soul. Glenn Phillips stormed EDGAR'S for one night and his talent with the guitar was phenomenal. The Cruis-OOMatics made Clemson dance, shout, and knock themselves out well into the morning hours. From "Under My Thumb" to the "Hawaii Five-O" theme song, it was a night of from Nashville, played original music described as 60's lyrics with an 80's beat. The Killer Whales rocked Clemson for two nights as EDGAR'S once again was overflowing with young people responding to the beat of rock and roll.

These were only a few of the events sponsored by the CDCC during the last school year. An emphasis was put on live music to try and start a revival of an event that seemd to have died. The crowds did prove that live music was capable of making students forget their problems for a while.

ATCHLEY RESIGNS

President Bids Clemson Farewell

Moving van, empty home, interim president, all preceded by a protest rally — all underlined the truth. Dr. William Atchley, president of Clemson University was gone. Understandably, opinions differed on his resignation, many outraged, some satisfied, some indifferent, but all shared the concern of the stability of campus life.

A main concern was that of keeping the university's functions continuing in a smooth manner until a new president could be chosen. Fortunately, Walter Cox, who held the position of vice president of student affairs, was able to perform the duties of president for the interim period. As of the beginning of the fall term, the choices for the permanent position were narrowed until fifteen, but the final decision was far from being made.

In the meantime, classes, extracurricular and social activities continued. The undercurrent of insecurity was offset by the momentum created by the established routine of faculty, staff and students.

PHONE FOLLY

Clemson's Last Romance With Ma Bell

The response to the new phones installed during the summer by AT & T was positively negative. At first students were delighted to have digital phones with several nice features but became discouraged and irritated because they could not seem to get the phones to work. Granted, some of the confusion was due to unfamiliarity; but the majority of the problems stemmed from the system itself.

The digital type of phone does save time, but only if the user does not have to depress the switch hook three or four times to get a dial tone. The feature announcing an incoming call on a busy line would have been nice if it were only a slight beep; rather than a ring that momentarily disconnects the line. In addition, the generous call-forwarding feature would only work on university lines.

The long distance service did appear to be fairly reasonable with the largest inconvenience being changing from the Stan Number system of Southern Bell to authorization cards of AT & T. Instead of dialing the long distance number and giving a number to an operator as the original dial procedure required, students now dial both telephone number and the authorization number into the phone as a result of the digital system.

Considering the fact that the old phones did not have special features and did need replacing, some may think that the students did not have a legitimate gripe. However, the general agreement seemed to be that the old, simple, effective system was preferable to the newer, complicated and untrustworthy digital phones. An interesting thought was that faculty and staff had to be taught how to use the new phones. Overall, some improvements were made to the system, but until the problems are solved, students will be dissatisfied and the debate about the separation of the AT & T companies will continue.

After gaining national recognition last season, the Clemson Players set out to provide a continuation of the same quality entertainment. In addition to the regular fall and spring productions, the Players also sponsored an evening of one-act plays and two summer plays. Dedication and talent were responsible for the increasing success of the college theatre group.

The Clemson Players produced two plays during the summer of 1985: The Real Queen of hearts Ain't Even Pretty, an original play by Brad Davis of the University of Alabama and directed by Chip Egan; Winners, an Irish drama written by Brian Friel and directed by Raymond Sawyer.

The first fall production, Lanford Wilson's Fifth of July was quest directed by Clemson graduate Robin Roberts. This production focused

With the generous support of Alumni and one family in particular, the historic guide of Clemson, Tillman Hall, underwent some major internal changes and some minor external changes. A planned 47-bell Clemson Memorial Carillion was initiated with the installation of six new bells provided by alumnus Rembert Gregory "Red" Horton and other members of his family.

In preparation for acceptance of the new bell system, the tower received new hands and new faces. A special interior scaffolding was provided to support the 42,000 pounds of 47 bells. In addition, the existing bell, which had serviced the tower for 80 years was removed and stored for future display.

All of the bells were to be manufactured by Paccard Fondue de Cloches, Annecy-le-Vieux, France with these first six installed by Van Bergen Bellfoundaries, Inc. "Eight other bells have already been purchased by Alumni," says Jeff McNeill, assistant vice president for development. In addition, plans have already begun to promote the sale of the remaining bells, according to Robert Sorrells, who contributed an article on this subject to the Clemson University News which provided information to TAPS.

STUDY HALL REOPENING

Back By Popular Demand

EDITOR'S NOTE: Shortly before football season ended, the management of The Study Hall closed out what had been a twenty-year tradition. Like many area businesses, The Study Hall was unable to overcome economic instability and the town's ongoing parking problems.

As the franchise, "Fin's Seafood," took over the Study Hall the summer of 1984, students expected to enjoy only memories of what had been a twenty-year tradition. However, after only one year, students were exhilarated at the announcement of the reopening of the Study Hall and waited impatiently for the doors to open and welcome them back.

What prompted the return of the once popular restaurant and bar was the question of many curious but never-the-less delighted patrons. According to the co-owner Carol Finley, the same problems that caused the closing of the Study Hall also prompted its reopening.

Expecting to attract a more adult or family type of business, the franchise had been initiated by Barry and Carol Finley, so the business never really changed hands. With the consideration of the other types of restaurants in the downtown area, Fin's seafood would have provided a nice, dine-in facility. However, the addition of even more restaurants in this area and with parking continuing to present problems, the idea did not prosper.

Although the owner cited that drinking laws did very little to affect business at the Study Hall and the excellent deli food had returned, the reopened business did not seem quite as strong as before. Plans to boost business include the reopening of the upstairs family dining area. As far as the appearance, the building was expected to remain the blue-grey colors associated with Fin's, but to receive the engraved windows that once faced students on a day to day basis.

The owners wanted to express the intentions for a permanent closing of the Study Hall and the franchise was not some concocted publicity stunt.

At any rate, undergraduate students, graduate students, professors and local businessmen were happy with the Finley's wise decision. Some could probably have been heard saying — "Here's to the Study Hall. Here's to another twenty years."

THE STREET BASH

Clemson's First "Welcome Back" Event

Like years before, on their return to campus, students were greeted by signs of the area businesses. Not expecting anything unusual, students were surprised to see that a welcoming event had been planned for their benefit. Area businesses had collaborated in what was called the "Welcome Back" Festival, the first of its kind for Clemson.

Understandibly, organization for this first street bash may have been lacking. For example, students were unsure of what the celebration entailed. The short duration found students missing the entire festivities. The reaction of several students was: "It didn't last very long; by the time I got there the whole thing was over."

For those who did not miss the action, businesses had provided samples of their merchandise or services, and books of coupons for many useful products were given out. Students browsed around clothing stores and grabbed tidbits of food, filling up on "under two dollars," as one student verified. All in all, the participants enjoyed good bargains and tasty food while being entertained by WFBC-FM radion station, the cheerleaders, a small brass contingent from Tiger Band, and, of course, the Tiger.

In general, most students expressed a desire to see this street bash become an annual event with, perhaps, dancing and other forms of entertainment becoming a part of the activities. Despite some confusion and the disappointing shortness of the event, students appreciated the town's effort to welcome them and to acknowledge the importance of the university's financial support.

BEAUX ARTS BALL

Continuing an International Tradition

On September 27, 1985, the twenty-ninth annual Beaux Arts Hall was held at Lee Hall courtyard. However, the tradition of this event goes back to turn-of-the century France. The students at the French school L'ecole des Beaux Arts, a fine arts and architectural school, initiated the ball as a competition in which the students displayed their own creative projects and ideas, independent of school projects. Eventually, it evolved into a masquerade ball. Some museums and most architectural schools in Paris still have an annual Beaux Arts Ball.

In the spring of 1956, the first Beaux Arts Ball was held at Clemson in honor of graduating architectural students and sponsored by the Association Student Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Recently, the ball has been held in the Lee Hall courtyard and is now sponsored by the 3rd year architectural students.

Some of the themes have been "Once Upon A Time", "Southern Exposure", "Black and White", "Underground", and "A Journey to No End", which was held at the Y-barn and the guests were taken to the ball blindfolded. One recent theme was "The 1950's", in which the scenery featured a drive-in theater with old

1950 model cars parked in front of Lee Hall. When he university police awoke Harlan McClure, then dean of the college, to ask why all those wrecked cars were at Lee Hall, he replied, "Oh, they made it!"

The theme of this year's Beaux Arts Ball was "Animation." Many dressed as their favorite cartoon characters, from the ever popular Flintstones and Jetsons to the more recent Smurfs. Whatever the theme, originality and creativity as reflected in the costumes continued to be the hear of an international tradition.

PATRICIA RUSSELL

As a guest speaker for Black Alumni Week, Patricia A. Russell expounded upon the duties and responsibilities of black students in a predominantly white campus. Russell has contributed to society in many ways as she was former Chief of the complaints branch of the Mass Media Bureau for the Federal Communications Commission in Washington. Now as a practicing attorney and president to Patricia A. Russell Consultants, she has prepared several publications for keynote addresses across the nation.

Educationally, Russells' background is diverse, having degrees from Howard University Law School as well as one from Kentucky State University. Familiarity with different parts of the nation has given Russell a well-substantiated view on the roles of college students. By encouraging minorities to accept their duties as a way of continuing positive change.

According to many who were able to hear Patricia Russells' words, her advice was inspirational. Admiring her tremendous ability as a speaker, the audience gained much insight on the responsibilities of the college student.

SCOTT CROSSFIELD

All photos by Scott Harkey

Eagerly anticipated by the two audiences he entertained as part of ROTC week, Scott Crossfield focused upon his recollection of early space research and his professional and private role with aviation.

The audience seemed most interested in perhaps the most glorious part of Crossfield's career, his role in the design and testing of the X-15. With two degrees in aeronautical engineering, Crossfield holds a position as Technical Consultant to the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Science and Technology. Not only had he been a Navy fighter and gunnery instructor, he also was involved in the Air Force. NASA, the Federal Aviation Administration, Eastern Airlines, and Hawker-Siddele Aviation, Inc. all benefited from Crossfield's association with them. Crossfield went on to mention the value of simulators, wind tunnels and models which have eliminated the need for flight tests. Crossfield stressed the risk in flight tests with failures sometimes ending in the death of the pilot.

Much of Crossfield's speech focused on his activity in the field of aviation, which was exceedingly impressive. From the thrills of early flight tests to the drama of the discoveries of the modern space age, Scott Crossfield displayed unsurpassed knowledge in the world of aviation.

BRUCE JENNER

All photos by Sherril Oates

Attitude and outlook are critical to personal success according to Bruce Jenner who spoke in Tillman Hall on November 11, 1985. As an established sports commentator, actor, producer and author, the 1976 Olympic Gold Medalist achieved his goals through positive thinking.

Illustrating his points with his experience in sports, Bruce Jenner shared moments of success and failure, urging students to examine their own. Claiming that athletes must possess great positive mental attitudes, Jenner cited Mohammed Ali as one of the few superstars who could express his attitude freely. Jenner continued, attributing one of his few losses in sports to a negative attitude. His answer to this, and all problems, was soul-searching.

Jenner's message to his varied audience was the importance of examining both successes and failures, of experimenting with life, and self motivating through positive thinking. Being as successful as he is, Jenner's advice was well received.

DICK GREGORY

All photos by George Michael Nelon

Dick Gregory, a comedian, political activist, and author, was the first speaker in the "From Our Roots" series. His January 28, 1986 presentation was a part of the observance of Black History Month. Gregory gained the attention of his audience by immediately attacking both the Soviet and the United States governments.

The wide range of topics included the government's stance on the issues of the assassinations of Alabama Governor George Wallace, Robert Kennedy, and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Gregory insinuated that even if the government was not responsible for these deaths, it's agencies were guilty of covering up the full truth of these assassinations. Objects of Gregory's attacks included the FBI, the CIA, and the American Policies on Grenada and Lebanon. Gregory went as far as to equate the United States to the Soviet Union: "The United States and the Soviet Union are hoodlums and thugs and partners in crime together." Although the majority of Gregory's speech centered on the negative side, he did have praise for Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the NAACP, and the Urban League.

Not known for mincing his words, Dick Gregory spoke out against the American government and its people. Earning his controversial reputation, Dick Gregory proclaimed that "there is no sicker nation on Earth than the United States of America" and challenged his audience not to be mere puppets of the government.

To ease the transition from high school to college life, all incoming freshmen were required to attend one of the eight summer orientations. The eager freshmen became aquainted with the campus, discussed their courses with an advisor, and usually made some new friends.

The new students were introduced to the dean of their respective college. The dean made a few comments about his college, and he answered any questions students may have had.

The University Union and other campus leaders touched upon numerous facets of college activities.

Even the notorious join-alls found they could not possibly participate in all activities, and even the most reserved found they need not be so in college. The message was clear: if you find yourself bored in the upcoming semester, it was your own fault.

The students were separated into small groups with a Clemson Ambassador, an upperclassman, as the group leader. "Be sure to bring an umbrella because it rains like hell here in August," was just one piece of advice shared with the rookies by the veteran. With the ambassador, the new students established a contact they could count on should any problem arise after they arrive in the Fall.

Not forgetting that education is what students are coming for, the Counseling and Career Planning Center stepped in with some helpful hints to the incoming freshmen. Tips such as "study a few hours each day and never cram for an exam" were offered. Counselors covered time management skills and offered a shoulder to lean on if things go a little too rough for the new collegiate to handle alone.

Parents were also invited to attend the orientation with their son or daughter. However, upon arrival, family was separated and students were paired into a room. This provided for a taste of upcoming dorm life. Having taken their University ID photos, and of course, having had their first taste of Harcombe cuisine, the new students began their college life.

MAX LENNON

Our New President's Agenda is Excellence

Assistant Professor to President in fifteen years. To say that our new president is talented would be an understatement of the year. Forty-five years old Max Lennon was named president from 300 applicants. His trail of achievements began at an early age.

Lennon was the youngest of eight children. He grew up on a farm in Columbus County of North Carolina. He followed the footsteps of seven other brothers and sisters and attended Mars Hill College. He then went to N.C. State University for a degree in animal science. Upon graduation, he went back to farming. He did well and was selected as Jaycee's outstanding young farmer for his region. In 1966, he went back to N.C. State University for his PhD in animal science.

Ruth Lennon plans to make an upstairs bedroom into a sitting room, where they can have simple breakfasts.

Beth Kicklighter

His PhD dissertation, Soy Flour as a Protein Source for Early-Weaned Pigs, drew sufficient attention for several job offers from industry. He chose the road of academia by accepting an Assistant Professorship at Texas Tech.

Unable to resist the challenge of private industry, he took up a job directing swine feed research division for Central Soya Co., a huge firm making and marketing soybean products. While with Central Soya Co., he traveled to various nations. With this opportunity, he learned the importance of internationalization. His experience helped to mold his view on the importance of university's role in preparing U.S. business stay competitive in the world economy.

"Look at agriculture. You have to assume that U.S. market is fairly well penetrated. The expansion in U.S. agriculture of necessity will come from world trade," said Lennon. He believed in the importance of foreign languge and studying foreign culture in the university curriculum. In this time when U.S. was lagging behind in world market, such curriculum will make graduates more competitive in the international economy.

Lennon, being a family man, got tired of the frequent travel and separation from family. Late 1974, he went back to Texas Tech as the department chairman in animal science. From there he moved to University of Missouri as the Dean of College of Agriculture. There he was instrumental in persuading the state to exempt the university from mandatory budget cuts. He developed the program called "Food for the Twenty First Century." The program focused on the direction of future agriculture. Needless to say the program was extremely successful, and the success took him to " . . . do the best you can with what you have . . . and tomorrow will take care of itself."

Chris Monroe

Ohio State University.

At Ohio State, he served as dean and vice-president for agricultural administration for previous three years. During his stay, Lennon created a program called "Ohio 21" The program looked toward the future, 21st century. It's goal was to revitalize Ohio's agribusiness. The program will bring in $12.5 million for research and $8.5 million for Cooperative Extension Program, annually.

Max Lennon took the executive office in March 3. He was the tenth executive of Clemson University. Trustee chairman Louis Batson of Greenville felt confident about Lennon's ability: "I think Max Lennon has the potential to make Clemson a premier institution in the United States."

"Lennon is an idea man, more interested in innovation than details . . . "

Vern Verna

At the ground breaking ceremony, Lennon (with McMahon's sunglasses) honors Senator Strom Thurmond.

As the cliche goes, "behind every successful man, there is . . . a woman." There was no doubt that Ruth Lennon also shared that uncompromising attitude toward failure. Max Lennon met Ruth in high school and they were married in 1961 when he was a junior in N.C. State. They had two children, Daniel and Robin. Daniel, who is twenty-three years old, was a sophomore majoring in food science at Ohio State. Robin, at twenty-one, was a junior majoring in home economics at Texas Tech.

Dr. Craig Davis, the director of the School of Natural Resources at Ohio State had this to say about Lennon: "he has unusually developed management skills for an academician. He listens to everyone and gets input, but he knows where he is going."

Lennon's colleagues agreed, "Lennon is an idea man, more interested in innovation than details; he always does his homework."

University expected Lennon to "stir things up," to be a "dynamite president." In turn, Lennon "will give the faculty equal opportunity to become unequal." He believed the role of administration should be to guide and to support the faculty, coinciding with his open participatory management style.

Lennon said that he made the decision to accept the job at the last minute, with his wife in a Greenville motel. They believed it to be a part of God's will for them. Lennons' were devout christians of Southern Baptist denomination. Lennon was a deacon and a sunday school teacher for married students at Ohio.

With his faith, Lennon upheld certain christian values. He did not drink or smoke. However, he made it clear that he did not take the job to impose a set of values to students or faculty. He acknowledged that he personnally held those values and he had them in perspective.

Lennon had certain vision of the role of land grant university. He believed it should provide students from working or middle class with broad, solid education that looks toward the future. It ought to be a place where faculty members are engaging in exploratory research to further the expanding capabilities. Furthermore, he believed it should be a place where the results of the research is put immediately into practical applications; they should solve problems and repay those that support the university, the society.

"Without an effective, thriving land grant university, South Carolina will not accomplish (economic development) goals. But it is documentable that, if a land grant university does well, it can put the whole state on an aggressive track," said Lennon.

According to Lennon, world wide scale of economic and industrial transition is taking place and S.C. is part of it. He said "the land grant university has a major obligation in that transition . . . to provide quality education."

Before accepting the job, Lennon was concerned if Clemson was ready to position itself for the 21st century. He became convinced that there is enough commitment at various levels, and thus, he took the challenge.

Tremendous controversy surrounded the role of athletics, culminating with the resignation of Bill Atchley. There was considerable talk about athletics versus academics in a nation wide scale. There was no doubt that Clemson carried a rich tradition of athletic excellence, especially in revenue producing sports. When asked about athletics, Lennon answered, "some very important decisions are going to be made in the next several years."

In Ohio State, athletics were controlled by the faculty; Lennon was already exposed to a model of academic and athletic cooperation at Ohio State.

"I prefer the simple commitment to quality people. I really believe in quality people and what they can do," remarked Lennon. "We have to operate on the premise that there is life after sports. As much as I enjoy them, it's still a game. The athletic contest is a game, but it's the academic contest that we have to win. That one is for life or death. So it's best to keep it in perspective."

Throughout his career, Lennon stressed the importance of a mission. He believed that the activities of the university should be geared toward a mission. He refused to be distracted by state's goal to specialize two major universities or it's failure to do so. The likeness of special programs was not important, rather, he reasoned that the importance lied on sticking to the mission of the program. His motto was to "do the best you can with what you have . . . and tomorrow will take care of itself."

Creative leadership, according to Lennon, is the key ingredient in transforming an institution into a competitive position. But in addition, he acknowledged the critical nature of the commitment within the institution for a successful transformation.

Lennon thought highly of the quality of the faculty and the students in Clemson University. He wasted no time in letting the faculty and the students know that we are all in this together.

The first family proved to be well ready to tackle the challenge of their success. Matter of fact, success seemed to run in the family. One of his older brothers is a retired army general, and Alton Lennon, the former U.S. Congressman, is his cousin.

Max Lennon is just the person Clemson University needed.

R.M. Cooper Library

Technology clashes with tradition

A rare book from 1595 that described the wonders of the New World seldom had much in common with a sophisticated computer system from 1985, except at Clemson University, where both were found at the Robert Muldrow Cooper Library. Clemson's library system is characterized by this blend of old and new that begins with the history of the Library itself.

Born before 1900, the Library spent its early years in a small upstairs room in Tillman Hall. Its collection was small — in 1912 the catalog listed less than 8,000 volumes — but as the Library grew older its holdings grew larger and new quarters were granted in what is now Sikes Hall. In 1966, the Library moved to its present headquarters, the beautiful and modern six-story structure that accommodates 1,365 readers and over one million volumes. In addition to the main Library, branches were operated in Lee Hall by the College of Architecture and in Sirrine Hall by the College of Commerce and Industry. Furthermore, departmental libraries were organized in Brackett Hall for Chemistry and Geology, Kinard Laboratory for Physics, and in Earl Hall for Chemical Engineering. Including books, periodicals, documents, reports, microfiche, and reels, the Library's total holdings amounted to more than 1.3 million.

But while the Library has matured, it is still changing. On January 25, 1985, a most important feature was added to the Library: the Library User Information System, more commonly known as LUIS. This program and database represented significant technological advancement. The system allowed the Library staff to perform many routine tasks, such as producing purchase orders, keeping track of check-in records for journals and magazines, and verifying records in the database for users. From terminals inside or outside the Library, users had access to the bibliographical records of all books and periodicals acquired by the Library since 1975. Through title, subject, or author, anyone could search the Library's records to determine the location of a given book. By 1987, users will have access to holdings acquired before 1975 and nearly all other materials. Consequently, the massive and cumbersome card catalog system will be eliminated.

If LUIS symbolized the future for the Library, then Special Collections symbolized the past. The holdings of Special Collections represented many years of acquisition, and were divided into three section: Rare Books, University Archives, and Manuscript Collections. Among Rare Books was first editions of works by Galileo, Newton, and others, along with many old and valuable books. Within the University Archives were the minutes of the Board of Trustees, student publications, presidents' papers, photographs, and other material which served as Clemson's "memory bank". Manuscript Collections contained papers of Clemson Alumni, faculty, staff, and administrators. Among the papers possessed are those of John C. Calhoun, Thomas Green Clemson, Dr. Rupert Fike, and Edgar A. Brown. The recently acquired Senator Strom Thurmond Collection served as a focus for further collection and for further resource use. Eventually, the entire Special Collections unit will be housed in the Strom Thurmond Institute.

Michael Morga

Thus, from the stiff pages of archival volumes to the blinking screens of computer terminals, the Library blended the old with the new. But with modern systems, extensive holdings, and dedicated staff, one thing stays the same: for students, faculty members, or state citizens engaged in research, instructional, or service efforts, the Clemson Library was one of the finest resources available.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY

Sirrine Hall Not Large Enough?

The College of Commerce and Industry was on the move. Since it began in 1981 as a reorganization of the College of Industrial Management and Textile Science, the college had been growing and changing. These changes were all for the better as the college sought to develop economic potential and spur economic growth throughout the region. Considerable success with these goals had been achieved through the excellence of the college's three schools — Accountancy, Business, and Textiles.

The School of Accountancy had twenty-one faculty members who contributed greatly to the school's success. Its curricular was constantly receiving updates in order to keep abreast of changes in the accounting world. For undergraduates, this curricula provided education in such areas as auditing, managerial, taxation, etc. and results in a B.S. in accounting.

The School of Business supplied similar opportunities. The School's attitude was exemplified by the Department of Economics' motto, "We do economics." Many diversified their academic career through private consulting work.

The Department of Finance, prepared students in such areas as business finance, institutional changes, and financial applications of computers. There was not a graduate program within the department but Master of Science in Finance is under development.

The Department of Management contained a staff of twenty-eight faculty members. Programs within the department included Administrative Management, the most popular undergraduate degree on campus, and Industrial Management, which focuses on the production/operation side of industry. Overall, the curricula emphasized a pragmatic approach to the fundamentals of management.

The Department of Marketing's primary purpose was to prepare students for some of the business field's most promising career opportunities — marketing. With the effective management of marketing activities being crucially important to any business, the Department of Marketing assured students a solid background in one of today's most complex and challenging fields.

These four departments

"I'm a senior majoring in Financial Management. I started out in Administrative Management and changed to FM because I felt AM was too broad. I've always been interested in finances; at home I've always been the one who managed money. My sisters always came to me for a loan.

"I'm going to graduate next December. After I graduate, I plan to work with a banking firm in Myrtle Beach. I'm from Myrtle Beach so I'll be close to home.

"Clemson was a great change of pace for me from 'hectic' Myrtle Beach, away from the tourists and crowds. I guess the hardest thing for me when I came here was being responsible for myself. I was used to having my parents do everything for me. Not that I was spoiled or anything.

Textiles studies began at Clemson in 1898. With internationally recognized professors in the classroom, a broad curricula with sufficient emphasis in polymer and fiber science, textile manufacturing, and movement of fibers, the graduates of this school became an important part of South Carolina's textile industry.

These four schools allowed the College of Commerce and Industry to reach many of its goals, but the college had additional means for continuing success. The Office of Professional Development gave South Carolina its largest provider of continuing professional education for industry and business. This office sponsored textile conferences, one-day management series, in-depth management programs, hands-on computer seminars, in-plant programs, and a variety of other programs that draw people from all over the world to Clemson. The Small Business Development Center served small business persons, consultations, education, and information to approximately 20,000 small businesses.

With so much going on, it was well that the College of Commerce and Industry was housed in Sirrine Hall. This building, every inch of it is needed as the college supplies research, education, and services of tremendous benefit to the students of Clemson and the people of South Carolina.

CENTER FOR POLICY STUDIES

Spreading the Works of Economic Research

All photos by Patricia Summers

Already, only after one year of operation, the Center for Policy Studies had become an integral part of College of Commerce and Industry. The Center, which was privately-funded, strived to enhance the research environment for economist at Clemson and their ability to display their best market oriented research. Because of the quality of Economics' faculty, the center played an important role in assisting the faculty in a most productive manner.

Dr. Roger E. Meiners, Director of the Center for Policy Studies, came to Clemson in 1984 and co-founded the center along with Dr. Roger L. Miller. Before coming to Clemson, Dr. Meiners served as Director of the Atlanta Office of the Federal Trade Commission with responsibility for eight southeastern states. Said Meiners: "Most major universities, especially those with good research faculty, have something like this center. With the quality of the faculty of economics department and their engagement in numerous research, the timing was right."

Working Paper Series allowed sharing of ideas by disseminating the results of current research to a wide audience. Some of the papers issued include "Affirmative Action and Minority Unemployment," by William Shughart, R. Tollison, and M. Kimenyi; "How Safe is Safe Enough?" by Bruce Yandle; and "What Has Happened to the New Economic History?" by Roger Meiners and C. Nardinelli.

The Economic Education also became a part of the Center for Policy Studies. The activities were funded by an endowment from the Stevens Foundation and Mr. Roy Pearce. Forty-five public school teachers enrolled in three-credit course which dealt with the principles of market economics and their application to various issues.

The Center hosted academic conferences and seminars. The Liberty Fund Conference, organized by Professors Richard McKenzie and Bruce Yandle, was a week long event of lectures and discussions. The fifteen scholars who participated were exposed to the challenge of capitalism, market for corporate control, poverty and unemployment, etc. Another conference brought together sixteen economists and economist/lawyers who were at the serving in Washington or had served in the Reagan Administration. The conference focused on discussions of reducing governmental regulations and making the regulatory process more rational.

The Center for Policy Studies provided a supporting foundation for the students and faculty of economic research. By utilizing the Center's resources, researchers were able let the entire nation know of their good work.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Beyond Mediocrity: Perspiration Over Inspiration

"We must remember that South Carolina (like most states) plays for only an "average" education. The goals of Clemson's College of Engineering go beyond mediocrity," said Dean J. Charles Jennett. Clemson's engineering curricula lived up to Dean Jennett's words as they are currently, ranked among the top 20 percent of all engineering colleges in the nation. Phasing out the Engineering Technology program further enhanced the advancement of engineering program.

Clemson was the headquarters for basic reliability research on Very Large Scale Integrated circuits (VSLI). These circuits were tiny but powerful enough that they will be the building blocks of tomorrow's superfast, supersmart computers. Although today's society is largely focused on computers and electronics high tech, engineering in Clemson stepped far beyond those disciplines.

Dr. James L. Burati, a civil engineering professor won a Presidential Young Investigator Award from National Science Foundation for his research to improve the construction of highways and runways. Burati was among only 200 researchers chosen from over 1000 in engineering and science. The award carried a potential of $500,000 over a five-year period. Dr. Burati will endeavor to pre-

The college submitted a letter of intent to S.C. Commission on Higher Education to incorporate CU Institute for Materials Research. The center will focus on the development and evaluation of advanced engineered materials as composites, metals, polymers, and ceramics for automotive, aerospace, and other industries. Major private companies as Exxon, Dupont, and ARCO supported the center. The South Carolina Productivity Research Institute will integrate basic and applied reseach activities and provide resources for industries of the state and nation.

Clemson's engineering reputation extended beyond the nation. The faculty was continually being invited to participate in international study committees, seminars, and conferences.

The College of Engineering had come a long way from a three room brick building to over 70,000 square feet of floor space. It continued to march in step with the newest advancements in engineering, and a few steps more.

30 YEARS OF DEDICATION

Professor Gill Robinson Builds Ceramic Engineering from Scratch

The legend went something like this: many had seen people walking through the doors of Olin Hall, but nobody had seen anyone walking out. Despite this, the Department of Ceramic Engineering flourished under the leadership of Dr. Gill Robinson. Robinson, before he stepped down, was the only department head Ceramic Engineering ever had. During his thirty years of dedicated service to the department, Robinson experienced myriad of changes, mostly for the better.

Dr. Robinson came to Clemson in 1946, returning from the Navy after the World War II. "When I came here, Calhoun was the town; Clemson was mainly the university. I came on the train; I remember my ticket read to go to Seneca, but the conductor told me to get off at Calhoun, saving me a long walk! To get home on weekends, students lined up in front of Sikes Hall and waited until a car stopped. Then, the first person in the line would get in the car. The idea of all this parking was quite different. If you parked where you park now, near the stadium, that would be the 'boonies' then," said Robinson.

In thirty years, Robinson erected one of the finest ceramic engineering program in the nation. When asked about such accomplishment, he contributed the credit to others: "a lot of credit goes to Frank Jervey, he was instrumental in obtaining grants for Olin building and equipment. We've been fortunate in assembling a good staff. We've had outstanding teachers whose first concern was students. They have diverse backgrounds; all come from different university, and bring unique talents. We've also had very fine students. I take the most pride in the graduates we had."

Says Dean Jennet: "I don't think there is one ceramic engineering person around U.S. universities who does not know Gill."

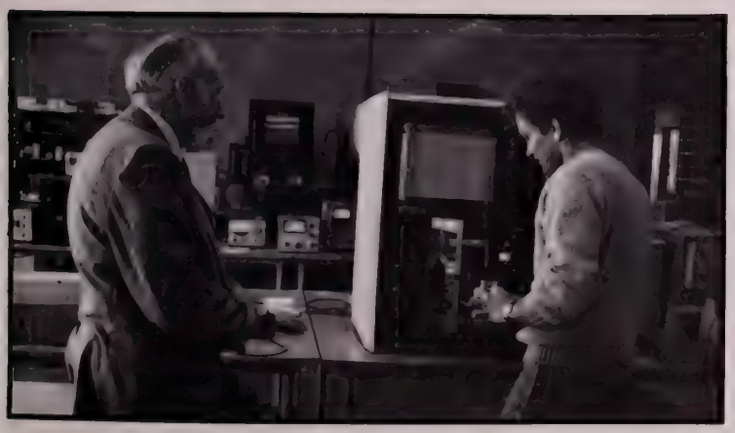
Ceramic engineering had been relatively obscure discipline of engineering. Ceramic engineerers built building products for civil engineers. They made electronic components for the electrical engineers. Ceramic engineers had same type of function as other engineers, however. Many of them went into sales, management, research and development. Said Robinson: "I brag about great percentage of my students who are presidents of companies."



Dr. Robinson can be found working and helping students even on Saturdays.

Asked about his decision to step down as the department head, he replied, "I've been in that position too long. We need a turnover and a change. It's good for the operation to bring about different ideas." By no means did his resignation affect his continuing efforts for the department. Robinson was working on a textbook or two. He was also involved in developing a funded center for engineering in ceramic manufacturing. Of course teaching was still priority one. "I like teaching best, but if you keep up with teaching, you have to find additional information to support your course work through research."

Dr. Robinson had been loyal to Clemson in other ways as well. All four of his children had graduated from Clemson, three in engineering and one in dairy science. Robinson felt Clemson to be an ideal place to live and raise children. "I like having four seasons. I would find Florida boring."

Professor Robinson had passed through administrations of Poole, Edwards, and Atchley. He saw Clemson change from military school to non-military school. He remembered when women was first admitted, and the first black student, Harvey Gant. Robinson believed that "Clemson performed admirably." Robinson performed just as admirably throughout those years. We, the faculty and students, thank him for his undisputed dedication to academic excellence in Clemson.

CALHOUN COLLEGE

Surpassing the Educational Limits

There is one college at Clemson that has no majors and offers no degrees. Then what does Calhoun College do? Calhoun College, the honors program, gives qualified students access to exceptional academic and social benefits.

In order to qualify for these opportunities, incoming freshmen must be invited into the honors program by scoring 1200 or higher on the SAT and by being in the upper 10% of their graduating high school class. Continuing or transfer students may choose to enter when they have earned at least a 3.4 grade point ratio at Clemson or other institutions. Once a Calhoun Scholar, all students must maintain at least a 3.4 GPR to remain in the program.

In return for their efforts, honors students receive many academic benefits. The first of these are block 555 preregistration cards. These assure students of scheduling priority. The most important benefit, however, is the privilege of taking honors courses. Each semester, students enroll in one honors class. These classes are unique in that they are small (generally around twenty students) and that they are taught by the best faculty Clemson has to offer. Chosen for their enthusiasm and dedication, honors professors enrich their teaching with experience as lecturers and researchers.

Patricia Summers

Calhoun scholars take one honors class a semester for their first two years and are then awarded Junior Division Certificates. Thereafter, students continue the program until graduation. With approval from the student's department and the Honors Office, a student may be graduated with Senior Departmental Honors, a distinguished achievement that results in the award of an Honors Medallion. In the past two years, sixteen students were graduated with Honors. This year, twenty-three students graduated with Senior Departmental Honors and more than thirty to fifty are expected to do so in 1986.

Yet another advantage offered to all honors students were honors seminars. These seminars gave students the opportunity to meet prominent speakers and dignitaries who came to Clemson. Among such people invited to campus this year are Joseph Epstein, Essayist and Editor of The American Scholar and Dr. Bonnie Dunbar, space shuttle astronaut.

In addition to the academic benefits, there were many social advantages. The foremost advantage was honors housing. Floors five and six of Clemson House house 128 honors students. Uniform quiet hours and a dining room in the building are two qualities that make this housing unique. Students also enjoy the privilege of living with people who share similar academic goals. In addition to these shared academic goals, honors students had many of the same social interests. This enabled students to strike friendships and join together in various activities and organizations.

Whether it was a co-rec softball practice, an Honors Council meeting, or a late-night study session, honors students shared mutual feelings and attitudes. All 425 students were hard-working, dedicated, and venturesome. Whether it was the Southern Regional Honors Council or an honors seminar, the students in Calhoun College strive for excellence. Although this college had no majors and offered no degrees, its many talented members and educational programs made it an important part of Clemson.

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

Teaching Profession Gains New Ground

Recently, the entire nation focused upon the teaching profession, and the need for qualified teachers was realized. There was no need for any alarm in this college as it was the state's major producer of competent math, science and vocational teachers. The college also offered nationally recognized graphic communications program.

Last year, approximately 1600 student-teacher placements were made to give the students actual teaching experience. The students also learned the ever important computer skills through the Learning Resource Microcomputer Lab. These and other programs proved to be effective. For example, the Commission on Higher Education designated the mathematics program as a Center of Excellence in mathematics education.

Godfrey Hall renovation began this fall and was expected to be completed by 1987. Approximately $2 million was being spent on the renovation. When completed, the lower levels will contain laboratories for drafting and electronics. The upper levels will house laboratories for printing, photography, micro-teaching, industrial training, and instructional resources.

As expected, the college placed significant emphasis on service. Off campus courses in mathematics, science, and computer education allowed continuing education for the teachers throughout the State. Reading and elementary teachers obtained information on reading instruction from Clemson Reading Conference. Writing teachers turned to Clemson Writing Project for help. The Computer Vantage continued to provide such services as conducting in-service sessions in public schools, participating in Piedmont Reading Council, and giving a presentation at S.C. Convention of the Council for Exceptional Children.

In addition to offering many services, the college carried out variety of research projects. Dr. John Walker and Dr. Gene Jenkins published NCAA Rule No. 48: A National Study of the Academic Implications for U.S. Secondary Schools.

Dr. John Richardson worked on "Teacher Incen-

Similarly, Dr. Henry Pate and Dr. Verner Burkett created "Computrack 500," a computer software and hardware package to demonstrate computer applications to industrial arts classes.

College of Education further expanded the opportunities and advanced the proficiencies of teachers to be and those already in the profession. Through instructions, services, and research projects, the college of education renewed its commitment to teaching excellence.

Seeing this happen is very self satisfying.

MATHEMATICS EDUCATION

Effort to Advance Math Education in South Carolina

The College of Education with Department of Mathematical Sciences had been designated as the National Center of Excellence in Mathematical Education. The straight forward yet innovative program focused on the goal to improve the quality of mathematics education in grades six through twelve in South Carolina.

The program will increase the number of secondary teachers certified in mathematics. It will also try to improve the professional image and knowledge of mathematics teachers in grades six through twelve.

Six projects made up the program. First, an institute was created to re-educate those secondary science teachers currently teaching a course in mathematics to become certified in mathematics. In addition, another project prepared the teachers for the National Teacher's Examination for mathematics.

The third project brought mathematics certified secondary teachers with a master's degree up to date with current mathematical advances. Upon completion, each teacher received a certificate designating him or her a "master teacher," with "30 hours above the master's endorsement." Eighteen hours were in mathematics, and twelve were in education. A related project trained junior high school mathematics teachers with weak mathematics knowledge. The teachers were given tests to spot their strengths and weaknesses. Then, they enrolled in a six week six hour institute during the summer to strengthen their weaknesses.

In the fifth project, Clemson acted as the clearing house to school districts wishing to offer certain mathematic courses. The college prepared math teachers from the districts to teach those courses. The last project concentrated on Advanced Placement mathematics teachers in high school. AP mathematics booklet contained up to date AP materials which was distributed on a regular basis. With these materials, the college bound high school students will be better prepared in mathematics when they enter college.

Dr. John K. Luedeman, Dr. John Kenelly of Mathematics and Dr. Sam Buckner of Education headed the projects.

COLLEGE OF SCIENCES

Expansion Creates Problems and Solutions

Days of Newton, Edison, or Einstein were gone but the discipline of science was here to stay. The pure sciences as biology and chemistry not only endured but also advanced, along with the applied sciences as computer science and mathematical science. The College of Sciences continued to operate with these advances.

The construction of the new chemistry building was on schedule and should be ready for classes in the coming fall semester. New equipment for teaching and research will be a major addition to the chemistry building. The new building and equipment came at a perfect time as the faculty research became increasingly recognized nationally and internationally.

Space continued to be a problem for the Department of Computer Science, located on the fourth floor of the College of Nursing building. However, the department enjoyed an increase in externally funded research although the enrollment began to stabilize. The demand for computer science graduates remained strong.

No more crowded, smoke filled chemistry labs when this building is completed.

In light of the return of the Halley's comet, the Department of Physics and Astronomy sponsored lectures on the subject. The department carried out its annual Physics Day, which introduced many high school students to the wonders of physics. The equivalent of Physics Day for biology, the Biology Day served those interested in the discipline.

The Department of Mathematical Sciences with programs in operational research, statistics, computers, etc. boasted national reputation. In addition, the department utilized its outstanding resources and taught training courses in mathematics to area high school teachers.

The Medical Technology program, now into its third decade, thrived in producing competent medical technologists. The program consisted of three years of lecture and laboratories in Clemson and one

"I chose Clemson because no one from my high school class went here. I wanted to go where I didn't know anybody and where I had to totally adjust. I knew I would be a minority, and that'll be true in the real world.

"I had to get used to being the only Black in class. I learned to communicate with professors and adjust to attitudes of different people. It was a challenge, and I love a challenge. If I didn't understand something, I had to go to a professor or ask a stranger. That helped me to be more communicative. It was important for me to do well here.

Halley's Comet Returns

Students didn't have to dig into their pockets for admission fees for the show that Halley's Comet provided. From November of 1985 through April of 1986, Halley's comet could be seen in the southern sky with the aid of a telescope or binoculars, and at some points, with the naked eye.

A member of Clemson's Department of Physics and Astronomy and the Astronomy Club were active in events pertaining to the comet.

Dr. B.B. Bookmyer, a professor for many years in the Department of Physics and Astronomy, conducted several lectures about the comet at local Rotary clubs in the area. She also led a tour to China, keeping people interested in the comet to follow its trek across the sky.

"It's unusual for a comet to last as long as Halley's Comet has," Dr. Bookmyer said. "A comet loses a part of itself every time it completes one rotation, and Halley's has been around since 240 B.C. In 1910, Halley's Comet was at its brightest.

The Astronomy club, headed by Dixon Lomax, sponsored three public viewing sessions during the weekends of December 13th, January 9th and April 14th.

In addition to comets, the club routinely tracks meteor showers, movements of the planets, and twice a year observes deep sky objects.

What exactly did we see? Comets are made up of a nucleus about ten miles in diameter, and a surrounding cloud called the coma, which can be as large as one million miles in width.

According to Dr. Bookmyer, the nucleus is a mixture of frozen gases and water combined with some dust particles. Dr. Bookmeyer called it "a dirty snowball."

The coma is created by meltdown of the nucleus as the comet nears the sun. Bits of dust and other particles are pushed away from the nucleus, which is

ALUMNI MASTER TEACHER

A 'Workaholic' With an 'Open Door Policy'

Dr. Christopher M. Sieverdes, a 41 year old associate professor of Sociology, sniffed flour to prove a point about cocaine in class, had a picture of Steve Martin on his desk, and had rolled up poster of ZZ Top on his bookcase. If you were saying to yourself, "he is my kind of professor!", you were not alone. Professor Sieverdes was the 1985 winner of the Alumni Master Teacher Award, an award given annually by the Student Alumni Council to honor the best undergraduate professor.

Sieverdes, who felt that humor was an excellent way to get through to students, had been teaching at Clemson since 1976. Although he may joke around some in the classroom, he took the education of students very seriously. Personal improvement were the two key words in his class. For an exercise in his introductory course in sociology, he divided the class into upper, upper middle, middle, and working class, with about the same distribution that occurs in society. The money was distributed according to social class. The students then exercised their authorities. The rich vigorously guarded their privileges, and the poor eventually became angry.

Dr. Sieverdes had wanted to teach ever since high school. First he received a degree in history at University of Richmond because of the rich history background he had from growing up on a dairy farm in rural Virginia. After army services in South Korea, he later changed to sociology and received a M.S. at Virginia Commonwealth University and Ph.D. at Mississippi State.

He was specialized in criminology and juvenile delinquency and he had published a number of articles in a wide variety of criminal justice journals. He also presented over two dozen papers at professional meetings.

Besides the Auumni Master Teacher Award, Sieverdes received a Provost Research Award, the Emory S. Bogardus Award, and is an honorary member of the Alpha Kappa Delta honor society.

Says Sieverdes: "what makes me happy is when my students do well in the classroom and become successful professionals." Dr. Sieverdes considered himself a "workaholic," however the work that he does is to benefit the student not himself. Although he had assigned office hours, he really maintains an "open door policy" for any of his students who have a problem. A student comments, "Dr. Sieverdes really turned me around when I was in trouble academically and emotionally. I'm still in school and I thank him for it." Sieverdes said that he doesn't mind helping anyone, but frowns on those students "that fail to work up to their potential," — the potential that he goes extra steps to help identify.

Professor Sieverdes, with his wife Jo and their three children, felt comfortable in a small town setting. He came to Clemson because he felt that the University was well rounded and still growing. Now, he felt that Clemson had lived up to his expectations. He was glad to be an integral part of it. Obviously, his students felt the same way.

COLLEGE OF FOREST AND RECREATION RESOURCES

Conserving the Balance of Nature

"The college is dedicated to promoting the wise management, use, and stewardship of the State's forest resources and to enhancing the quality of life of its people through a rewarding use of leisure," said Dean Benton Box. The critical nature of his statement cannot be overemphasized as the college was the center of forest and recreation center for South Carolina. The Department of Forestry and the Department of Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management took on this responsibility.

Emphasizing the importance of conserving the only renewable resource, Forestry educated many foresters who manage the 12.5 million acres of land in the State. It taught two three-week sessions in silviculture to U.S. Forest Services. Foresters from all over the eastern United States attended this six week course. It also conducted workshops for country extension agents on using computer models to evaluate economic opportunities in forestry, and regenerating forest stands naturally.

Research projects included such topics as integrated pest management in

"I'm from Easley, and I commuted my first semester. That was a real hassle so I got on campus. It took me about a year to learn how to study. My father went to Clemson and his uncle also came here so it's sort of a family tradition to come here.

"Forest management is scientific management of forest for continuous production. I didn't know a lot about it but I got into it because I loved being outdoors.

"When we say managing forest or land for production, it doesn't mean just timber, it also means wildlife, recreation, and water. Foresters are conservationists, not preservationists. Trees are renewable resources; forestry attempts to acquire maximum production on a given plot of land.

"I co-oped with Westvaco in Jasper County. I was sort of forest technician, cruising timber, and supervising reforestation, and wild fire suppression. I would like to eventually work for a big corporation in paper or lumber industry."

The Department of Parks, Recreation, and Tourism Management engaged in various public service and resource development programs. The Clemson University Outdoor Laboratory served individuals and groups from the entire state of South Carolina. During the summer camping season, over 600 children and adults with special needs were served.

Project Rainbow for Hope, a commitment of $125,000 over five years from S.C. Jaycees and Jaycees Women was underway to create an endowment for the Clemson University Outdoor laboratory.

The Regional Resources Development Institute continued to develop in applied research. Research programs included assessing threats to National Parks in South Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Georgia; developing a Regional Resource management program; and evaluating fee systems for non-commodity use of forest and park lands.

Considering forest products industry and recreation and tourism adds $5.5 billion to the economy of this state, this college's efforts were vital to the advancement of not only the university but to the state of South Carolina.

ADVANCEMENT IN PAPER PRESERVATION

Textbooks Will Last Forever

Dr. David N.S. Hon, a wood chemist in College of Forest and Recreation Resources made a great advancement in the paper preserving process. Since modern paper had a tendency to become very brittle and to discolor, Dr. Hon's new process should put an end to deterioration occuring in America's libraries.

In 1984, Dr. Hon presented research papers before the national meeting of the national meeting of the American Chemical Society, which revealed his major advancements in the paper preservation field. One of the advancements dealt with early detection of deteriorating books and documents, while the other advancement conquered the problem of deterioration and the preservation of books indefinitely.

To detect early deterioration, Dr. Hon used an instrument called Attenuated Total Reflectants Spectroscope. A laser beam scanned the paper, looking for signs of acidification. If acids were discovered, the paper was properly treated through a technique called draft copolymerization.

In the past, paper to be preserved was simply coated with a material to neutralize the acid. However, the chemical had a tendency to leach out after a few years.

Documents to be treated by the graft copolymerization method were placed in a glass container and treated with preservative. This preservative was a substance with simple molecular structure known as a monomer. A reaction began and the monomer became more complex and was transformed into a polymer which bonded to the surface of the paper.

"Our method is not a physical chemical treatment," Hon said, "with copolymerization, the monomer converts to a polymer that chemically bonds to paper, creating a stronger fiber. Because it is a true bond, the polymer becomes part of the paper molecule and can't leach out."

Hon demonstrated the effectiveness of this process by placing an ordinary tissue in water, causing it to fall apart. However, when a treated tissue was placed under water, the water beaded up on the surface and did not penetrate the tissue. The resulting is one of a stronger fiber, virtually waterproof and color stable.

The Library of Congress was so impressed with Hon's experiment that they allowed him to experiment on some of their holdings dating back to 1790. Hopefully, his technique will be made accessible to all the libraries one day; current deacidification techniques were complicated and costly.

Dr. Hon received his degrees in chemical engineering and polymer science from Tokyo University. He received his doctorate in forestry from Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

Enriching the Minds of the Dedicated

Graduate School set a challenging environment for dedicated academic students and professionals. Graduate study did more than merely further a student's undergraduate knowledge. Every advanced degree Clemson granted was tailored to be unique to the needs of the individual.

The students had greater voice in graduate curricula than for the undergraduate although an advisory committee of professors guided each graduate student from enrollment to graduation.

Graduate school offered 67 master's and 29 doctoral programs. The degree programs could be broken down to two categories, professional degrees and research degrees.

The professional degrees were often associated with a credential or license for the recipient to practice some profession. The Architecture and Education programs were typically professional degree granters. Research degrees involved students in completing certain research in his area of study, finalized by thesis or dissertation. The Colleges of Engineering, Science, and Agriculture typically granted research degrees.

A master's program normally took about two years to complete. Doctoral studies required two to four additional years after a master's. Defending of one's dissertation completed the doctoral program.

Even though Clemson was recognized primarily for its undergraduate program, graduate school boasted national reputation in numerous areas. The Mathematical Science, Electrical Engineering, Environment Systems Engineering, and Architecure, among others were nationally recognized for excellence.

"Under the leadership of President Max Lennon, we believe the Graduate School will remain strong, although condensation of some weak programs may occur," said Dr. Farrell Brown, Associate Graduate Dean. The enrollment had been steady, around 2400 for the last few years. That number was expected to remain stable.

Said Dr. Brown: "Graduate School is ideally for those who have a thirst for deeper knowledge of a subject . . . It is not for everyone. The best motive is not just to go to school but the sincere desire to learn."

COLLEGE OF NURSING

Care is the Key Word

Health care industry grew immensely during the last decade. Naturally, the demand for registered nurses grew with this growth. The College of Nursing successfully tackled in preparing students for their career in nursing.

The four year program was designed to provide students the fundamental education necessary for the practice of nursing in hospitals, clinics, health agencies, etc. The first two years emphasized the broad liberal education while the last two years stressed the principles of professional nursing. With this rigorous program, the college attained a place of distinction among institutions preparing professional nurses.

"As a nurse, I am fully responsible as a practioner and as a caring person. I try to do the best that I can do. Doctors assign the orders but how they are carried out affects the recovery of patients. I thought of medical school, but I wanted to have a life rather than going to school until I am thirty or more.

"Over the summer I worked with doctors in pediatrics. I loved it. I would like to work in new born care and pediatrics. I want to work in a large, teaching hospital where new things are always going on. I'm from Virginia, and I'm going back there after I graduate.

"After visiting other universities, I visited Clemson, and the tiger paws got me. I knew Clemson had an excellent nursing program, and everyone I talked to was cheerful and excited so I came here.

The faculty and students of Nursing produced a weekly newspaper publication, Live Well column; the column dealt with current health issues and tips. Recently, the column expanded to sixty second radio productions that was heard throughout South Carolina. The faculty and students also managed the Nursing Center. The center, located on the first floor of the College of Nursing building, provided health education, immunizations, health screening, and other nursing services.

The faculty engaged in variety of research. Some of the topics were Leadership Behaviors in Selected Professional Nurse Population by Dr. Cynthia Lenz, Dimensions of Wellness Among Candidates for a Wellness Program by Dr. Syble Oldaker, and An Investigation of Blood Pressure Variations in Older Adults by Dr. Betty Baines.

The College of Nursing won the professorship for the Clemson University Distinguished Black Scholar in Residence for 1985. Margie N. Johnson RN, PhD began residence as a member of the faculty and continued her scholarly pursuits.

The College received a grant from the Department of Health and Human Services to instruct primary health care for registered nurses interested in school nursing. The program commenced in October.

Said Dean Mary Lohr: "As we move into the nineteenth year of the College of Nursing, we aim to make nursing education at this university the best in the South, the region, and the nation. An overall objective is to offer high-quality programs which will have a favorable impact upon health care in the state and nation."

SCHOOL NURSE PRACTITIONER PROGRAM

Nursing Strives to Improve Health Care of School Children

Responding to the need to improve the quality of health care offered in public schools of South Carolina, College of Nursing instituted a training program for school nurses. The two-year program became possible through a $550,000 three- year grant from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Clemson was the first to provide this program in the region.

Ten new students each year will go through nine-week summer sessions for two consecutive years, earning a maximum of nine credit hours each year. Upon completion, the students will be able to take the American Nursing Association's practitioner certification exam. Since only 1000 of the nation's 45,000 school nurses have practitioner training according to a national survey conducted by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, the program was a highly necessary one.

Nurse-practitioners could treat many problems that a registered nurses could not without a doctor. They will be able to offer services to children at a lower cost than regular health care facilities.

Dr. Dolores A. Evers, director of continuing education in nursing believed this program will enhance a child's learning by discovering early health problems which keep a child from performing to his potential.

With public health clinics, hospitals, and health agencies, was this program necessary? The answer was a resounding "yes." Studies indicated acute health problems to account for 75-80 percent of school absences. Considering possibilities that these health problems interfere with students ability to learn, early detection or treatment became important.

According to the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control, S.C. ranks third in the U.S. in illiteracy. 66.5 percent of S.C.'s eleventh graders scored below the national norm on standardized achievement tests. One of the ways to correct those problems was to make sure the students were healthy enough to take full advantage of academic opportunities.

The program will center on physical assessment skills, communications skills, and working with handicapped children. Also, there will be emphasis on setting up wellness programs at school. With skills acquired from this program, the nurses will be able to meet health problems of the teens, primary care, and developmental and functional disabilities.

Although the enrollment was limited to ten new students each year, Dr. Evers said the renewal chances of the program was good.

STUDY ABROAD

Discover a New Culture

"[Studying abroad] immensely broadened by mind," said Bart Snyder, after a year of study at Phillips University, Marburg, West Germany. Bart was one of twenty-five undergraduates who had spent their last year studying in a foreign land.

Clemson offered three ways to experience a new culture. A short term study usually involved about six weeks study abroad during the summer. This type was the most popular with the language departments. Last summer, Dr. Fernandez and about a dozen Spanish students explored the culture of Spain. Also, the College of Architecture sends its students to Italy where Clemson owns a small villa. There, students were able to study the different types of architecture, including those of the past.

A direct exchange involves a Clemson student and a foreign student directly "exchanging" places for a semester or two. Currently, the management department has a direct exchange program with Pau University in England. A graduate program in electrical engineering with Japan is also being considered.

A long term study can be achieved through International Student Exchange Program. ISEP exchanges are small scale student exchanges among the participating institutions all over the world. More than 70 institutions outside the U.S. are available for exchanges. Only limits to where a student may go is his language skills and having another student who wishes to come here from that area. The advantages of ISEP is that a student becomes a direct part of his host institution, takes the same course, participates in the same activities, and has the same assignments as the regularly enrolled students at that university. The student usually attends the host institution for a period of one year.

Bart, a psychology major, took classes in psychology, literature, and art at Marburg. He said, "the expectations were greater there, the professors expect you to actually have something between your ears."

"There were no real textbooks, instead a list of literature to be read was handed out. This provided greater opportunity, independence, and free time, especially since the classes were two hours long and met only once a week.

"It was tougher to get to know the professors and classmates. I had to learn to talk around because I didn't know all the words. However, it was an awesome experience. I got to travel to Munich, London, Amsterdam, Paris, Vienna, and many other places."

Obviously, studying abroad will broaden a student in aspects that a classroom or a textbook just cannot. However, it is not for everyone. Said Bart: "you must be open minded to enjoy things that are new. If you are already set in cement with stereotypes, I wouldn't recommend studying abroad to you."

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

Teaching the Survival Skills

With engineering and sciences as the wall, the College of Liberal Arts provided the foundation. Regardless of profession, a basic general education was a must to survive in today's society. The College of Liberal Arts pursued the challenge of this ideal.

The Department of History experienced international recognition. Dr. John Wunder received a Fulbright Award to Finland; Dr. James Miller accepted a Fulbright Award to Morocco. Dr. Donald McKale was one five scholars invited from the United States by West German Goverment for a study.

The faculty of the college taught nearly a third of the credit hours taken by the student body, though only nine percent of the students majored in Liberal Arts Field.

In addition to this load, the College served the public and the students in variety of ways. The Writers Forum created an environment of idea exchange. Carolyn Forche, a poet, Peter Taylor, a short story writer, John E. Wideman and Shelby Hearon, novelists were featured. Each writers gave readings and held informal discussions with enthusiastic students and writers.

The College conducted summer institutes for Advanced Placement teachers in American History, English, European History, French, and Spanish as part of the Educational Improvement Act.

Writing, Speech, Language, and Music laboratories were available to students. Any student who was deficient in any of those areas could utilize the labs to correct his deficiencies.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Cultural Source and Media

Festivities, culture, and customs are words that create images of people. To Dr. John Ryan, Assistant Professor of Sociology, it was not Indians or Africans who came to mind but music and television.

Once a professional guitar player, Dr. Ryan examined the production of culture in the music industry. Focusing on organizational behavior as the central constraint on the production of culture, Ryan discovered that ASCAP tended toward a standardization of product. "As ASCAP gained monopoly, they used their position to exclude 'country' or 'black' music. When culture became business, they produced cultural works but for profit. The business decisions affected what and how much of what we hear and see," said Ryan.

He found similar problems in his study of BBC in England. Its cultural programs were affected by its mass audience appeal. When BBC featured quality cultural program, they suffered from lack of viewer support. Therefore, BBC turned to superficial programs with mass appeal to stay in business, thus the introduction of profit motive affecting the production of culture.

Dr. Ryan, originally from Rochester, New York, felt the Clemson community to be distinct and friendly. He had been here three years, since receiving his PhD from Vanderbilt. In just three short years, he proved to be an unique, dynamic professor. How many professors do you know who has a Madonna's Rolling Stones' cover on the wall of his office?

Dual-Career Women

Feminism brought women out of the house into the work world. Women proved they were just as capable as any men. Unfortunately, their occupational motivation was an overload to their domestic chores.

Lundy Hill

Dr. Donna K. Crossman, a visiting Assistant Professor of Sociology, investigated the multiple-role satisfaction of dual-career women. She surveyed 124 women members of the Metropolitan Women's Center in Columbus, Ohio. The respondents were currently married and living with spouse, working full-time professionally, and had at least one child under the age of eighteen living in the home.

"The respondents' self-reports of coping strategies (both attitudes and behaviors) indicate significant effect on managing professional, familial, and personal demands simultaneously. As a consequence, respondents also report increased levels of self-esteem and commitment. Although spousal support contributed to these women's multiple role satisfaction, it was definitely the women's individual coping abilities which reduced the potential stress inherent in the conflict between home and occupational roles," commented Crossman.

Another important finding was that in spite of the high educational attainment of 1.24 years of graduate work, only one third of the women held upper-level professional jobs. The rest were still in technical, administrative, or sales support.

STROM THURMOND INSTITUTE

Institute Promises Balance of Research and Public Service

On a cool November morning, amidst a large cheering crowd behind the library, Senator Strom Thurmond with Vice President George Bush broke ground for the Strom Thurmond Institute. The Institute will amass archives, lobby, office space, 300-seat auditorium, commons, and support facilities in 50,000 square feet, five story post-modern brick building.

The Institute had unique qualities which set it apart from other similar centers. The importance of the Institute was not the building but the program. It was action and policy oriented.

Strom Thurmond was elected to the U.S. Senate in November, 1954 by a write-in campaign. He was the first and only person ever elected to the Senate in that manner.

"Strom Thurmond is a man of consistent courage . . . Courage such as few men ever show in political life.

The crowd reaches forward to get a good look at George Bush and Strom Thurmond.

"I envisioned a place where learning and understanding could thrive, where a course for the future could be cast . . ."

Although security was tight, the ground breaking ceremony was a huge success.

Suk B. Fields

Vern Verna

The concern lied with identifying state, national, and international problems and providing policy recommendation.

The Institute involved the students. The students acted as hosts, participated in seminars and class meetings, and were able to keep close contact with visiting scholars. Such prominent leaders as Jesse Helms, Jesse Jackson, and lecturers as Guenter Van Well, Ambassador of Federal Republic of Germany to the United States, and Jim Ferguson, Chairman of General Foods Corporation, enriched the minds of students.

South Carolina will benefit from the Institute. Many of the research and service activities target to the needs and concerns of the state and the region.

Vice President Bush said this about the Institute and Strom Thurmond: "we're here today . . . to honor a man who has never been afraid to commit himself in public life . . . This center will house a testament to political courage . . . in Senator Thurmond's papers; and that, I expect will make this center truly a place for 'the study of excellence in government and public service.' "

The institute building was expected to be completed in eighteen to twenty-four months at a cost of 5.5 million dollars. When completed, it will live up to the words of Strom Thurmond. "I envision . . . a living institution — one where scholars could study all facets of government and students could prepare themselves for careers in public service . . . a place where the history and tradition of this great nation could meet head-on with bold, new ideas for our future."

COLLEGE OF ARCHITECTURE

Architecture Extends Beyond the Region

Architecture, City and Regional Planning, Visual Arts, and Building Science curricula were offered only in Clemson in the State. With these special curricula and others, the College of Architecture displayed unparalleled substance.

Many of the students had the opportunity to study in Italy. The Clemson Architectural Foundation provided an Overseas Center for Building Research and Urban Study. Many fourth year and graduate students were involved in this program.

The College sponsored a variety of lectures. Some of the topics included "Design Perspective of an Architect/ Mayor" by Harvey Gantt, the Mayor of Charlotte, North Carolina and an architect; and "South Carolina Railroad Towns" by Stanford Anderson, Professor of History and Architecture of MIT.

The faculty, aside from their teaching load, kept busy in various projects. Professor Don Collins made one-week cultural study trip to Leningrad and Moscow. Professor Yuji Kishimoto gave a lecture on "Urban Rhythm" for the Columbia Council of Architects.

"In planning studies, we learn the basic tools for planning. We look at the structure of the local government and look at the role of plans. We study methods for identifying problems and analyzing these problems with some technique. We learn techniques for architecture design, economic development, and population analysis. We learn how to formulate solution through use of plans and how to implement those plans.

"I came to America in 1977 and Clemson in 1982. It took several years to settle down, and surprisingly I found it difficult to communicate. I've been married for nine years. I have two children, a girl and a boy.

"It is hard work trying to keep a family life and pursue academics at the same time. But I have a very supportive husband, and he shares a lot of work.

"I won the Frederick K. Bell Memorial Foundation Scholarship, a paper competition between Clemson and Georgia Tech, given to a student in Planning Studies.

"After completing the program, I would like to work a little and then pursue a PhD. Eventually, I would like to teach, consult, or do research."

ArcHI-TECH

Designing for the Future

Because of the overwhelming demand, the architecture department at Clemson, one of the top programs in the southeast, could only accept one hundred out of three hundred applicants in the 1985-86 year. The students who were accepted first had to go through interviews as well as the normal application procedure. They had to meet with the dean of the college to ensure their eligibility for the program. These students then began a rigorous schedule which taught them the fundamentals as well as an in depth study of art and architecture in our society and ones gone by. An important factor in the curriculum was keeping up with the advancements in our society.

One of the ways that the architecture department was able to do this was with the new design computer which was installed during the Christmas break. The Autocad design computer was donated to the Architecture department by the firm of Skidmore, Owings, and Morrill of New York. This computer enabled the users to design anything from small houses to entire cities. The undergraduates as well as graduate students began using the computer in the spring semester.

Another way that the department kept up with the times was with its cooperative education program. This enabled the students to get the work experience they needed towards their apprenticeship. This entailed three years of work experience needed before they were able to become full architects.

These were structured internships in which the student worked with an architect in their field. The programs gave a fantastic amount of experience and were highly stressed by the department. Though not required, the school related internships helped the student gain the needed experience. Students were also allowed to find jobs on their own to get through their apprenticeship.

Another plan in the department was the post-baccularеate program. This program allowed the students who majored in subjects other than architecture, including liberal arts, art, and engineering, to get into the architecture program by taking some undergraduate courses but not going through the whole program. After a year or so in the post-baccularеate the student then attained graduate status in the architecture program. Then upon finishing these courses the student had a masters in architecture.

Like all technical majors, the architecture department strived to keep up with the times. Emphasizing computers, sending students into the workplace for new ideas, and helping students from other majors, who never thought they would be able to become architects gain their dreams, were all part of a plan to bring beauty and innovations to our society.

Patience, perseverance, and practice make almost perfect.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURAL SCIENCES

Agriculture Tackles Tough Times

Farming industry continued to face severe economic problems. The poor image of agriculture as a career, along with the nation's drive in high tech industry, accounted for the low enrollment in Agricultural Sciences. Considering the importance of agriculture in sustaining the human race, the help provided by the graduates of this College will be vital to agriculture's recovery.

Even though farming industry faced a crisis, agriculture consisted of far more than farming. The College of Agricultural Sciences commanded the responsibility of preparing students for this multifaceted industry. Within various curricula, the College stressed the application of principles and problem solving. This involved a little less emphasis on technology and more emphasis on the "basics."

Agronomy, part of Plant Sciences, engaged in an Extension education program for each of South Carolina's major agronomic crops. The program entailed transfer of most current research information to the crop producers. For example, soybean producers were introduced to a computer program which aided in selection of pest resistent varieties.

The Division of Livestock-Poultry Health conducted regulatory programs in consumer protection, animal health, and disease diagnosis. The department checked for the wholesomeness of poultry and processed food products in the State. Animal Diagnostic Laboratory, staffed with six veterinarians and eleven technicians, provided diagnostic services in animal pathology, bacteriology, virology, and serology.

The College's several special programs assisted those with low income and limited resources. Under the Small Farms Program, Extension service professionals conducted on-farm demonstrations, showing the farmers methods of crop or livestock production. The program also assisted the farmers in marketing their produce.

Although enrollment was low, the demand for students remained high. The College offered diverse, solid programs to meet the needs of falling agricultural industry. The graduates of this College will be part of the help the industry so desperately needs.

"Horticulture is fruit production,plant breeding, botanical gardening, and new plant introduction. Ornamental horticulture is getting popular. For example, if you go in a mall, you'll usually find some type of plant scape."

"I was accepted to Land Student Coop Program to work in 'Future World' land green houses of Epcot Center. It used hydroponics to grow all types of plants, tropical and desert. BIRDS AND THE BEES

Are Entomologists fighting a losing battle?

Think of what it would be like to be born, grow up, procreate, and die all in one day!

Understanding the life cycles of insects help entomologists to promote beneficial species to help mankind. Although there probably is not one person who had not been bitten by a mosquito or scared stiff by the cockroaches in Johnstone, the discipline of entomology was not quite as familiar. Then, what exactly is entomology?

Insects crawled on this planet before man walked and will probably crawl a little longer than man. Insects served as food for birds, game, and other animals; they played an important role in pollination of flowers, fruits, and vegetables. Almost one million insect species were identified, but less than 10% of them are enemies of men. In fact, most are neither harmful nor useful. However, the presence of and the absence of certain insects were vital for food production and health control. Overall, insects played a critical part in balancing the ecology.

Clemson professors engaged in various research in entomology for the benefit of men. Associate Professor Tom Brown, a toxicologist, experimented with new compounds of pesticides that are less toxic to man. Working from an army grant, Dr. Brown investigated insect control, alleviation from poison symptoms, and effects of pesticides on insects.

Urban entomology was a young branch in entomology, but it touched every household and industry in the United States. It dealt with household pests as cockroaches, fleas, etc. Dr. Zungoli pursued for suitable solutions to those pest problems.

Professor Meryl Shepard recently returned from Phillipines, where Professor Shepard investigated insect control. Professor Shepard's effort was part of an international cooperation under the International Rice Institute.

Aside from research, the Department of Entomology, Fisheries, and Wildlife maintained a busy extension service.

"Everyone in the state is a potential client of ours. We receive hundreds of specimens, sometimes just shattered pieces of an insect, from home gardeners to farmers," said Dr. Sydney Hays, head of the department.

Experimental Stations were located around the state. Many times the insects must be found and that means rolling up the sleeves and getting the knees dirty.

"We have to find them (insects) and study them in their environment," Hays commented, "not many of them are harmful but those that are will eat everything on the table and the table too! Insects and men are competitors. They have a counter for everything men throws out. We have to work just a little harder . . . "

Insects were plentiful everywhere from deserts to Alaska, and they provided quite a few important products. Beeswax, used as base substance in cosmetics in the past, was an insect product. Honey, schlack, and some pharmaceutical products were also from insects. The growing importance of insect products opened up a variety of career opportunities for entomology graduates in business and industry.

Entomology may not be a household word, but the role it played certainly affected every household.

GRADUATION

The Final Act

A nice spring morning in April. People started to gather in front of a large building. Greetings could be heard exchanging hands, some for the last time. It was graduation time in Tiger Town which signified the end of yet another stage of life for students.

For some graduates, the ceremony meant the end of studying long hours in Cooper Library and waiting in lines at Sikes Hall for drop/add cards. It meant the end of going sailing on Lake Hartwell and partying with close friends. It also meant graduating to bigger and better things in life, such as a well paying job . . . or for some, the unemployment line.

Parents, siblings, grandparents, and friends began filling Littlejohn Coliseum early in the morning in hopes of getting a good view of their loved one as they shook hands with the president of the university and received their coveted degrees.

As the Symphonic Band played and the graduates filed in, cheers could be heard from the audience — and the graduates. Some donned their caps with architectural designs, buttons, bumper stickers, and of course — the tiger paw.

The guest speaker for the ceremony was University President Bill Atchley, who was presiding over the ceremony for the last time, stressing that the new alumni should not give up their goals and should strive to achieve all that is possible.

Names were called one by one, encompassing ev-

However, most hurried back to their seat as bachelor degrees, masters, and doctorates were awarded.

However, when all was said and done, it was the congradulatory hug and kiss from mom and dad and the teary parting of close campus friendships that made the entire ceremony worthwhile.

Fall Just Short of Title

Clemson's 1985 Baseball team finished its longest season with an above .500 record, 36-30-1, but it was moreover a season of indvidual triumphs. Coach Bill Wilhelm garnered his 750th career victory. The other individual standout was Jim McCollom. McCollom, the Tiger's star first baseman, set numerous school and ACC records.

When the year began, Wilhelm said of the '85 squad, "This might be the best group of players we have had to work with since I've been at Clemson." The offense came through, providing a team batting average of .308. Where the Tigers had trouble was in the pitching department. Clemson's hurlers had a dismal ERA of 5.18.

February marked the beginning of the new season. The Tigers opened with six away games. After splitting two games with Citadel, Clemson took three out of four from Valdosta State. Junior John Pawlwski pitched the Tigers' first shutout in a 9-0 effort against State.

The Tigers then opened their home season with a close 4-3 defeat at the hands of UNC-Charlotte. Thus, the first month of action ended with the Tigers standing at 4-3.

March came and so did the ACC season. The Tigers opened the month on the road again. Facing UNC-Wilmington, Clemeson dropped two out of three. Duke them came to town. The Tigers amassed sixteen runs in two games to win 5-0 and 11-2. Senior George Stone pitched the shutout in Clemson's first ACC win.

Old Dominion rolled in as Duke left. The visitors outlasted their hosts in the first game 6-5, but the Tigers came back the next day to win 8-2. UNC-Charlotte and Francis Marion then both became victims of the men in orange.

The middle of the month marked a disaster. Clemson only managed one win and one tie in six games. Tiger pitching was repeatedly shelled. The stretch began with a 8-7 loss to Campbell. Then the Tigers achieved a two game split with East Tennessee State. Then in Blackburg, after a series opening 4-4 tie, Virginia Tech made an easy play of the guests. The Hokies exploded to score 34 runs in two games, winning by the margins of 14-7 and 20-6.

"Night games gave me the opportunity to watch my homeruns sail into the darkness."
— John Jay

During the last eight days of March the Tigers faced three different ACS foes. When the dust cleared the Tigers had a 6-1 conference record. The only loss came against Virginia. The Cavaliers disposed of the Tigers in convincing fashion, winning 19-1. On the up side, Clemson swept two games from both Wake Forest and Maryland. Pitching was the key in the latter as the Terapins were held to one run while Clemson drove across thirteen.

Spring continued as April rolled around. The Tigers began the month with seven home games in which they won six. The most important victory came on April 5th against North Carolina. Besides being a conference victory, the 3-2 triumph was Coach Wilhem's 750th win.

Two days before, Georgia Tech fell prey in Tiger country 4-2. The day after Wilhelm reached the 750

The Tigers were flying high until a four game stretch marked by three ACC losses occured. On the tenth Clemson dropped a tough 3-2 decision to Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Two days later the Tigers rebounded against Davidson on the road. The hosts thrashed by the margin of 19-0. Pawlowski again went all the way for the shutout.

Clemson stayed on the road for two more games in North Carolina. First the Tigers stopped in Chapel Hill where the Tarheels blasted the visitors 10-3. The story from Raleigh the next day wasn't much different as the Wolf Pack beat the slumping Tigers 9-4. The three loses left the Tigers with a

The Tigers opened Friday with a game against Maryland, whom they had swept earlier in the season. The Clemson pitching staff had troubles right from the start. Wilhelm was forced to use three pitchers in the first inning. Maryland scored eight times in the top of the first.

Clemson refused to quit as the Tiger hitters responded with a tournament record six home runs. Scott Dillon, John Jay, Steve Baucom, Ray Williams, Tommy Thompson, and Bert Heffernan all smacked round trippers to boost Clemson to a 17-12 victory.

After beating North Carolina in a close contest 3-2, Clemson faced Georgia Tech. Playing on their home field, the Jackets dealt the Tigers their first loss in the double elimination tournament, winning 12-9.

Saturday the Tigers were faced with a must win situation as they took as Virginia. Clemson avenged its earlier drubbing by sending the Cavaliers home with their second loss. The offense shined again, combining for twenty hits. After falling behind 8-2, the Tigers scored seven in the next three to take the lead for good. Jim McCollom and Chuck Baldwin both had four hits apiece with each smacking a home run.

By Saturday night only two teams remained in the hunt for the ACC crown. Undefeated Georgia Tech and once defeated Clemson would battle for the crown.

The game was tied at four when Dillon gave Clemson the lad with his sixth home run of the year. The blast also gave Dillon a tournament record twenty hits. The Tigers couldn't keep the advantage as Tech scored three times in their final two at bats to win the title 7-5.

Clemson then seemed to buckle, losing eleven of their final seventeen contests. Included in the final stint was Clemson's first ever home night game. On May 13th, the lights came on and the Tigers trashed Furman 13-1. USAC then came in and took three straight night games. Clemson finished the season against New Orleans by winning one out of three.

The definite star for the season was Jim McCollom. The senior broke or tied six single season school records and two ACC single season records. These included most hits (98), most home runs (21), most singles (61), most RBI's (76), and total bases (188). McCollom now holds every ACC offensive career record except for triples.

GOLFERS HIT MARK

Receive Bid for NCAA's

The 1985 golf season marked the 45th year of golf at Clemson, Senior tri-captains Jim Macfie, Mitch Ralston, and John Trivison, lead the Tigers linksters to a rather successful year in Golf. Head Coach Larry Penley returned for his second year after a very successful 1984 season.

"We will have to learn from our mistakes early in the season."
— Coach Penley

Senior Jim Macfie played in the number one position. According to Coach Penley, "He is an excellent motivator for the rest of the team, and has excellent leadership abilities." He is the only returning All-ACC player on the Clemson team. Macfie finished second at the Furman Invitational and fourth at the Hilton Head Intercollegiate. He shot a 66 in the third round of the Hilton Head Intercollegiate, February 17, at Hilton Head, SC. His performances placed him second on the all-time Clemson list of top individuals rounds. With a career average of 74.25, he is Clemson's third best all-time player.

Mitch Ralston returned to play in his NCAA tournament and his first ACC tournament. With a stroke of 217, Ralston came in 10th at the ACC tournament.

John Trivison finished with the best stroke of the Clemson team with 73.19. He came in fourth at the Palmetto Classic twelfth at the Seminole Golf Classic, and thirteenth at the Furman Invitational. Trivson played in his second ACC tournament and his second NCAA tournament.

At the Hilton Head Intercollegiate, February 14-17 in Hilton Head, SC, the Clemson linksters placed third out of 24 teams with 891. North Carolina and Georgia beat out Clemson with 883 and 890, respectively.

The following week at the Tallahassee Seminole Intercollegiate in Tallahassee, Florida, Clemson came in fifth out of twenty-one teams from around the South.

On March 13-16 at the USC Spring Valley Tournament in Columbia, SC, the golfers came in second out of twelve teams. North Carolina edged past Clemson by 5 strokes.

Clemson ranked fifth out of twenty-four at the Iron Duke Classic in Durham, NC. And at the Furman Invitational held in Greenville, SC on April 3-6, Clemson golfers tied with Furman for 3rd place out of 23 teams.

Although Clemson finished 6th out of 8 teams at the ACC Tournament, Coach Penley said that the team shot their best score since the 1982 Tournament. Brad Clark shot a 63 on the second round of play and thereby broke the ACC single-round Tournament score by 3 shots.

Our theme, Drive for Five meant that we were shooting for our fifth NCAA Tournament bid."

— Coach Penley

The Chris Schenkel Invitational was the key to Clemson's receiving a bid to play in the NCAA Tournament. Clemson and NC State were jockeying for the fourth and final bid to be extended to the Northern District III schools by the NCAA. Clemson defeated NC State by 2 strokes. For the tournament, Clemson took 11th place out of 18 teams.

Jason Griffith, Jim Macfie, John Trivison, Brad Clark, and Mitch Ralston were the top five players representing Clemson in the NCAA Golf Championships. They finished 27th out of 30 teams. The high note for Clemson in the tournament was John Trivison's honor of the Aggregate Long-Driving Championship for hitting the longest 3 balls.

"We really had a good season. We wanted that fifth bid and we got it."

— Captain John Trivison

Clemson ended the season with 6 out of 8 top 5 finishes. This was good enough to give Clemson their 5th bid out of the last 6 years, their 4th bid consecutively.

Freshmen golfers played a positive role in this year's season. Freshman Jason Griffith set the Clemson Freshman Season scoring average. Freshman Brad Clark set 2 records at the ACC Tournament, Coach Penley believes that these two men will figure in as a tremendus assets for the Clemson Golf team over the next three years.

Entering into the 1985 season as one of the nation's top nine teams, The Tiger Tennis Team once again proved their excellence on the court. During pre-season, though, a lot of emphasis was placed on the inexperience of this year's team. Coach Kriese stated confidently, "This is the youngest team I have ever had, we could start three freshmen in the lineup this year, but they are fine players and I think they will be hungry." And hungry they were!

Led by Miguel Nido, the only senior on the starting team, the Tigers battled their way through the season and finished with an impressive overall record of 24-12. And of the 12 losses, four of them were by only a one point margin. Holding down the number one position, Nido finished the year with an overall record of 38-23. He is in the top five in career wins at Clemson and has had the best winning percentage of any Clemson tennis player over the last 3 years.

"I want everyone to think were physical animals and wrecking machines."

— Coach Kriese

Junior Richard Matuszewski held the number two seat and contributed in both singles and in doubles play to aid the Tigers. He finished the year with a 48-32 record. At the number three spot was Sophomore Brandon Walters. He was a returning starter for the Tigers and had the second best winning percentage on the Clemson team last year. He obtained an overall record of 49-33 in singles play and, along with Richard Matuszewski, the duo held the number one doubles spot and achieved an excellent record of 52-13.

Jay Berger is the highest ranked freshman on the team, playing at number four. Jay became the first American to reach the Orange Bowl finals since John McEnroe did it in 1977. He is an outstanding player who finished the year with a record of 57-11. Another Freshman, Brian Page, was ranked right behind Berger at number five. By using a very aggressive and attacking style, Page garnered an impressive 37-26 record, and will be a valuable asset in the years to come.

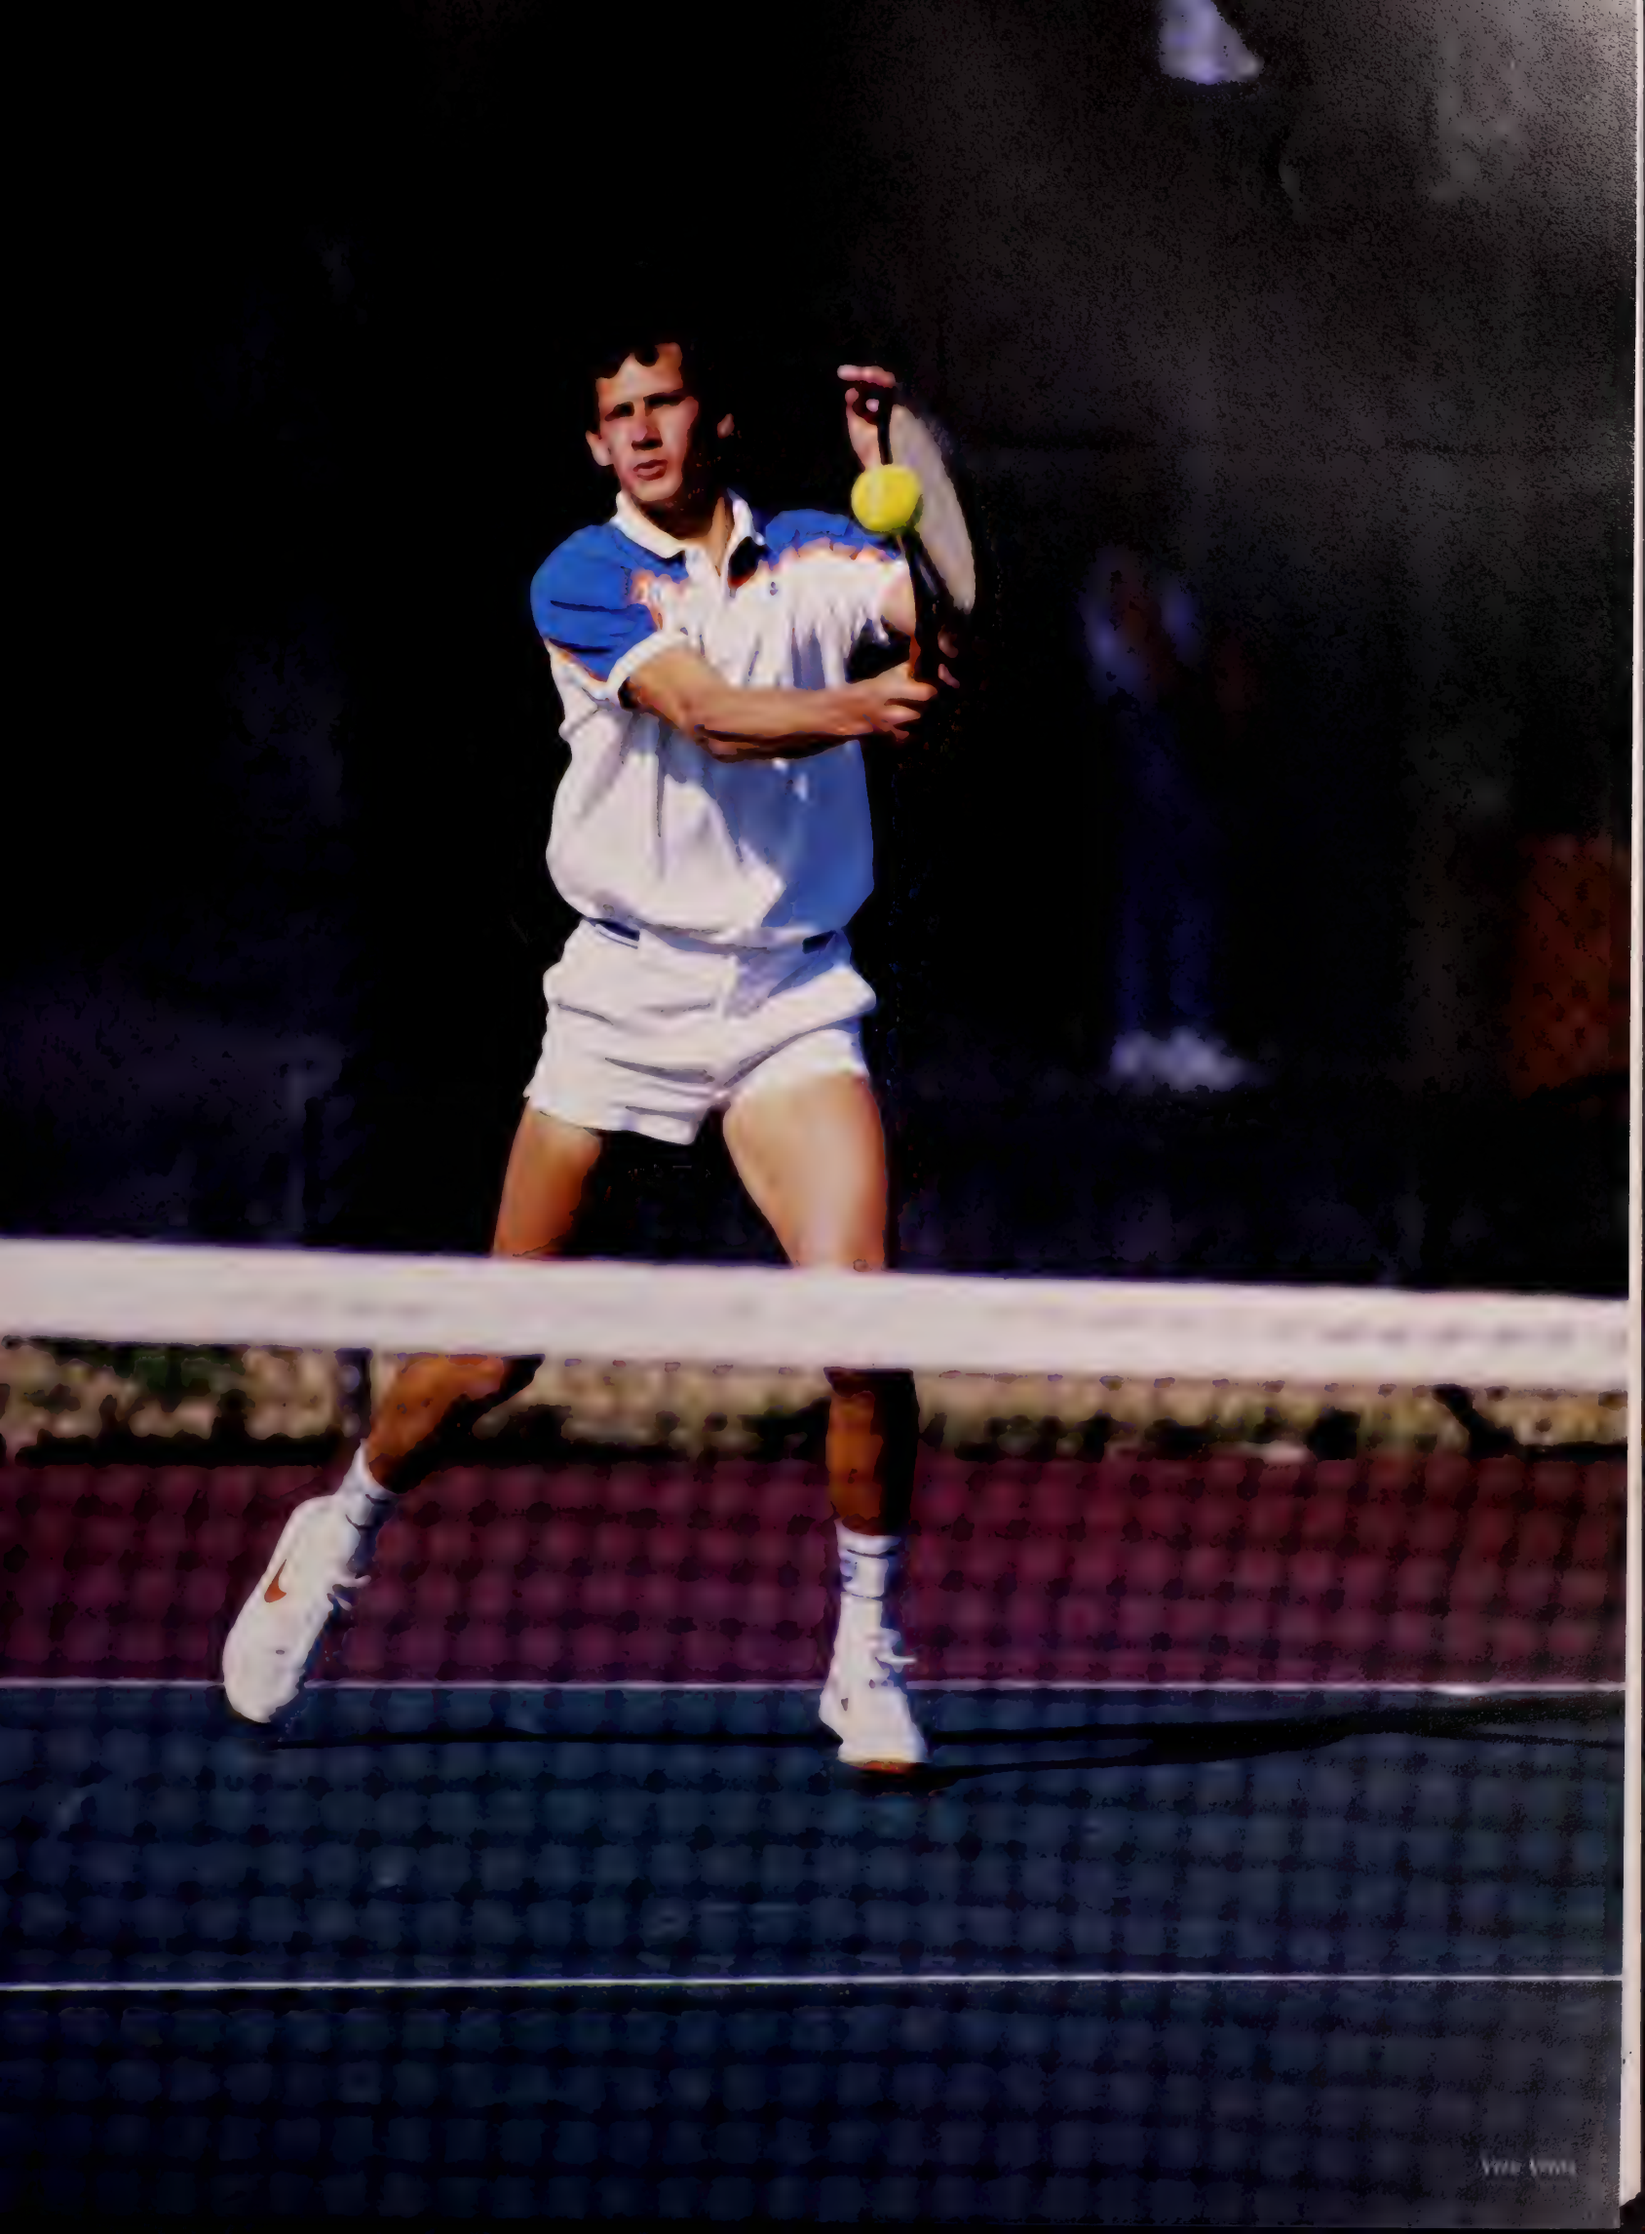
Finally, seated at number six, is Junior Joe Defoor. With experience of his earlier years, Joe contributed much to the success of this year's team. He also served as the team's elected captain and with his much improved serve and volley, he will continue to provide great leadership for his teammates next season. He completed the season with a record of 32-18.

"The win over LSU was sweet revenge"

— Jay Berger

The remaining Tigers are freshman Kent Kinnear, who, along with DeFoor, combined to form the number three doubles team and finished the season with 25-17 record. Freshman Robert Phillips, Senior Andy Gondelman, and Senior Bill Inman round out the rest of the Tiger team.

Junior Richard Matuszewski places a backhand shot.



ACC Reign Continues

During this season, the Tigers captured the ACC regular season championship for the second year in a row by triumphing over North Carolina, 7-2, and ended with a perfect ACC record of 7-0. This marked the sixth time in the last seven years that Clemson has obtained this title.

"We've got to win with our heads, our guts, and our legs."

— Coach Kriese

In the single's play of this ACC match, Richard Matuszewski, Brandon Walters, and Jay Berger all came from behind to win three set matches. As for Berger, it was his 51st win of the season; the second most wins in a regular season in Clemson history. In the double's play, Richard Matuszewski and Brandon Walters ran their ACC record to 7-0. For Matuszewski, it was a Clemson record 50th doubles victory of the season.

Besides an impressive showing in the ACC finals, the Tigers also held the title of Regular season Tourney Champions. However, the most impressive accomplishment of this year's team was once again reaching the NCAA finals. In the first round, the Tigers pounced on Louisiana State and handily defeated them by a score of 5-1. However, in the 2nd round, UCLA barely got by Clemson by a 3-5 margin, and the Tigers ended their season with a quarterfinalist's position.

The team finished a fine season with a record of 24-12. The team was ranked 8th in the nation. The future was promising as all but one member of the young 1985 squad will return to do battle in 1986.

In doubles action Menne teamed up with junior Lisa Bobby to take the top flight. In the second flight, Stafford teamed up with Melissa Seigler for the championship.

The ACC tournament marked the demise of an incredible record. Seigler's loss in the semi-finals was her first loss ever in the ACC singles action. It snapped a 32 ACC singles match winning streak for Seigler. By winning her doubles flight, the senior garnered was 17-10 in the Spring and finished ranked in the top 20. The team was streaky through. The Tigers started the Spring with a three game losing streak.

ACC action started then as Clemson knocked off Maryland and Virginia. After beating South Florida the Tigers dropped five out of the next six. With fourteen matches left Clemson then hit a winning streak, taking thirteen while losing only one. The loss was to seventh-ranked San Diego State.

Individually, the story tied with the freshman. The three already mentioned combined with Heide Adam on Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., won 111 out of 159 singles matches for a 70 percent success rate.

TIGER SOCCER REGAINS ACC CROWN

Booters Gain Increased Recognition

Prior to the dawn of the season opener, Coach Ibrahim said that defending Clemson's 1984 national championship would be no simple task. Gone were Charlie Morgan and Adubarie Otorubio; gone were Peter Coles, Chuck Nash, and Maxwell Amatasiro. Ibrahim said that Clemson could be successful if the Tigers got a few breaks on the field and could avoid a few breaks in their bones.

Clemson did have a few things in their favor though. Coach Ibrahim had an excellent recruiting year last spring. Furthermore, the Tigers main scoring punch, Gary Conner, Eric Eichmann, and Bruce Murray was back. Despite the guarded optimism from Ibrahim, the nation's coaches and sportswriters were confident enough to give Clemson the top position in the preseason poll.

"There won't be any easy games this year. Our games will probably be decided by one goal or two. If the breaks fall our way, we should be successful; if they don't, it could be another story . . . "

— Coach Ibrahim

The Tigers proved worthy of that lofty position when they opened against the College of Charleston on September 1. Clemson roared to a 7-0 victory in a game that was pretty much decided after the opening 10 minutes.

Clemson's next game was billed the rematch of the 1984 national title game as the Tigers traveled to Bloomington for the Indiana Adidas-Metropolitan Soccer Classic. The Hoosiers appeared ready for revenge as they scored just over eight minutes into the game and held on for a 1-0 halftime advantage. Eric Eichmann scored in the first minute after intermission so that after one half and 37 seconds, the score was tied, 1-1. Dick Landgren put Clemson on top less than seven minutes later, just to see Indiana come back for a 2-2 tie. Gary Conner came through for Clemson, scoring his second gamewinning goal in two games, and the Tigers won the rematch, 3-2.

Clemson met Joe Morrone's Connecticut Huskies for the championships of the Hoosiers Classic. The Tigers' 4-0 series advantage over UCONN may have given the Top Ten Huskies added incentive, because after 110 minutes of playing time, the score remained as it had begun, 0-0. Despite the tie, the Tigers returned home with the Adidas-Metropolitan first place trophy, and remained number in the ISAA soccer poll.

When Wofford's Terriers came scampering into Tigertown, Clemson whipped these little puppies, 7-0.

Clemson opened its ACC season in Chapel Hill and returned to the upstate with a 5-0 victory. Gary Conner scored three goals against the Tarheels, including his third gamewinner of the season. Paul Rutenis and Bruce Murray added the other Clemson scores while Paul Carollo tied a Clemson game record by serving three assists. Not only did Clemson move to 4-0-1, 1-0 with the win, but it also moved its series record against UNC to 11-4-4 while outscoring the 'Heels, 66-28.

The Tigers were still ranked number when they hosted their old nemesis, Duke. The last Clemson win over Duke had been in 1981, and that was a one-goal overtime win here in Clemson. Also on the line was the advantage in a series record that was knotted at 9-9-1. This was to be Clemson's and Gary Conner's day, though, as the St. Louis junior scored the game's only two goals, including one with 1:05 left to play to give Clemson a 2-0 victory and a 2-0 ACC victory and a 2-0 ACC record.

Clemson held a 15-1-0 series advantage over its next opponent when the Erskine Flying Fleet came to town. Despite that commanding lead and an equally commanding 55-13 scoring lead, Erskine took the Tigers to over-time in 1984 and played Clemson tough in both 1982 and '83 as well. The Fleet raced out to a 2-0 lead and went into the halftime break with a 2-1 lead and in what was perhaps the most dramatic ending in Clemson soccer history, J.R. after 15 minutes of play, the Tigers found themselves trailing by a goal. The Clemson defense pummelled Furman to help Clemson garner a 3-1 win and a perfect series record.

Clemson continued to roll in ACC play with a 2-1 win over the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest, but the win did not come with ease. Gary Conner's goal with just 3:53 left in the game sent Clemson's conference record to 3-0.

The Southern Connecticut Owls flew into the Tiger Den for a battle of number one teams. Clemson, ranked number one in the Division I polls since the preseason met the highly-touted Owls, ranked number one on the Division II level. Clemson soared above the Owls for a 3-1 victory.

"I'm proud of our tradition against Carolina. This is the best we've played since the Duke game. We had a lot of support from our fans today. I like that, it really helps . . . "

The biggest day in South Carolina soccer history came on October 13 when the top-ranked Clemson Tigers played host to the fifth-ranked South Carolina Gamecocks. Clemson had never lost to the 'Cocks in soccer, and South Carolina had not lost a game since losing to Clemson in overtime in Columbia in 1984. Over 6,000 people jammed into Riggs Field for the match, setting not only a series attendance record, but a Riggs Field record as well. Those fans saw Danny Ratcliff give Carolina a 1-0 lead after just 4:07. Paul Rutenis brought the Tigers to a tie, though, at 11:48. Bruce Murray then went into scoring action as he scored two goals for the Orange and White to round out the first half. Those goals were the only scored on this day as Clemson continued its soccer monopoly over the 'Cocks, 3-1.

to a 1-0 lead just to see J.R. Fenton tie the game before the half. Clemson exploded in the second half — Fenton scored another goal and Eichmann added two in leading Clemson to a 6-2 rout and improving its record to 13-0-1.

Returning to conference action meant returning to the road when the Tigers traveled to Raleigh to tangle with the Wolfpack of NCSU. After a scoreless first half, Clemson got on the board when Gary Conner scored just under 13 minutes into the second period. Bruce Murray added one more for the Tigers with just over 10 minutes to play, allowing Clemson to continue its domination of ACC and Tobacco Road teams.

Clemson had not lost a soccer game in 364 days when it traveled to Charlottesville to meet the Virginia Cavaliers. UVa, two-time defending ACC champs, had been the last team to knock off the Tigers, who only needed to win one of its last two ACC games to capture its first ACC championship since 1982. Several days of rain left standing water on the artificial surface at Scott Stadium, a problem that was worsened by continuing showers during the game. Like one year earlier, the Cavs scored a goal in each half and held the Tigers scoreless to take a 2-0 win.

The rain continued to follow the Tigers to Maryland that weekend in the title game of the 1985 ACC soccer race. A Clemson loss would give them a share of the title. Pete Stebbins, whose home in Silver Springs, Maryland, was not far from College Park, scored two goals while the Tiger D thwarted several Terrapin scoring threats. The result: Clemson 2, Maryland 1. The Tigers had their first ACC title in three years; it was their first sole championship in four years.

in a game that was dominated completely by the Tigers. Tiger fans had seen this final score before when the last seconds ticked away and the scoreboard showed: Clemson 7, Guest 0.

The Tigers then closed out their longest regular season ever when they traveled to Miami to play in McDonald's — FIU Soccer Classic. Clemson stumbled to an 0-1-1 record in the two-day event.

Clemson defeated Florida International in 1984 to capture its own Clemson Invitational. The Sunblazers decided that turnaround is fair play and scored one goal in each half to take a 2-0 victory and capture first in its invitational.

Clemson, by right of its ACC title, was invited to the NCAA playoffs for the 12th time in 13 years. As they had in 1984, the Tigers opened the playoffs by meeting N.C. State. This time, the teams met in Clemson instead of Raleigh, but the outcome was the same as the Tigers clawed the 'Pack for a 5-2 victory. This triumph sent the Tigers into the Southern Regional semifinals.

After its October victory, Clemson held a 9-0 record against South Carolina. When the two rivals met in November, over 5,000 fans jumped jammed into Riggs Field to see whether or not the Tigers would make it 10 in a row. Constant rains from the previous week made the Bermuda grass surface of Riggs Field slippery, a factor that Coach Ibrahim felt weighed in Carolina's favor. The 'Cocks used those benefits to defeat the Tigers in overtime in a shootout after an exhausting contest.

After an exciting first half that saw close shots taken from both sides, Carolina settled back and played a defensive match the rest of the time. The Tigers were unable to counterattack because of the playing surface, and the Gamecocks smothered Clemson scoring attacks. Regulation ended with a 0-0 tie. The time had come for the shootout.

South Carolina won the toss and elected to shoot first. Bill Hency lined up and fired a shot that met in the top right corner of the net. J.R. Fenton then kicked for Clemson, but his attempt curved and went high and right of the goal. Marty Baltzegar connected with the left corner for Carolina, and Bruce Murray's subsequent shot put the Tigers on the scoreboard. Doug Allison's kick hit the top bar and bounced in for the Gamecocks, giving them a 3-1 lead that was cut when Pete Stebbins scored for Clemson. Danny Ratcliff scored for Carolina as did Tiger Paul Rutenis for Clemson. Riggs Field was flooded by fans in Garnet and Black when Arni Arnthorsson scored South Carolina's fifth penalty kick; Clemson never took its last shot. The South Carolina glory was short-lived, however, because the 'Cocks were parbroiled by American the next weekend in the NCAA quarterfinals.

Although Clemson did not retain its 1984 National Championship, the Tigers did recapture the championship of the ACC. Gary Conner led the ACC in total points and goals scored while Eric Eichmann set a Clemson single season assist record with a conference-high 19. Conner, Eichmann, and Bruce Murray were also named All-Americans by SOCCER AMERICA and the nation's coaches. All in all, 1985 was a fitting tribute paid to what should be the last season played at Riggs Field before it gets a facelift with a new playing surface and new bleachers and press facilities.

TAILGATING . . .

A Clemson Tradition

Ask any Clemson Football fan what the highlight of his Saturday afternoon was, besides the game, and he'll probably say tailgating. For some people, the game may be considered second to tailgating. But, no matter what order it is placed, it's a sure fact that the tailgating fascination has swept the nation. They come from all around; from Georgia to Florida, New York to Virginia, and Alabama to North Carolina. Miles mean nothing to these devoted Tiger fans. Some people bring their entire families — grandmothers and grandfathers, aunts and uncles, cousins, and even good 'ole Rover. What is the reason for all of this?

For some, tailgating is a time for families to come visit their children who are attending Clemson. It is one of the few times when they can spend time with their children. And after a week of cafeteria food, what student is going to complain about eating Mom's home-cooking?

Some parents come to see their sons play on the football team.

But there may also be those who don't have children or football players here at Clemson, but who have returned to regain some of their lost memories. For them, tailgating provides a time for old college friends who may rarely get to see each other. To once again be reunited and to reminisce about their past college days here at Clemson.

Then there are those who may have never attended Clemson, or never had anyone in their family to attend Clemson, but are simply true and devoted fans of the Tigers. For them, it is a time to spend with their families and friends and to sit back and enjoy all the excitement that Clemson offers.

But no matter for what particular reason people choose to tailgate, they all have two things in common. The first, is that tailgating is a time for rest and relaxation. Parents can break away from the pressure of their careers. Another thing that tailgaters have in common is their love and support for the Tigers. For without the fans, no sport can be complete. For what is it to achieve national championships if there is no one to share it with? Clemson athletes and students are the Tiger "Shuffling Crew" doing all they do it for you!

THE YEAR AFTER . . .

Young Tigers Suffer Rebuilding Year

At best the 1985 football season could be called interesting or a bit different.

More accurately, it would probably be called weird or even a little bizarre.

For this was a strange year for Tiger football from beginning to end. It was a year when even the roster looked funny in August with no Eppleys, Hatchers, or Refrigerators but plenty of Smiths, Williamses, and Johnsons. This transition year with many young, inexperienced players even started funny as a walkon who had never kicked in a football game won the first contest for the Tigers.

It seemed that if something different could happen in 1985, it did: an offensive lineman scored the winning touchdown for the detested Georgia Bulldogs, Clemson lost three of its first four games, Virginia actually thought they had a real chance to beat the Tigers at Homecoming, the football gods seemed to take away Clemson's best defensive players with injuries, North Carolina and Maryland defeated Clemson with the help of some interesting "catches," Danny Ford was reprimanded for arguing with referees at midfield during a televised game, and Clemson went to a bowl in . . . uh, Shreveport.

Clemson, in its first season after probation, finished the year with a 6-6 overall record and a 4-3 record in conference play. After starting slowly, the Tigers rallied to win four consecutive games, but they then lost three of the last four — the three losses coming in the final minute. Many young players gained experience throughout the 1985 season which should reap benefits in 1986.

At the end of the season, four Tigers were named to the All-ACC team: seniors Steve Reese and Steve Berlin juniors Kenny Flowers and Jim Riggs.

Years from now, David Treadwell can get a special book out, call his grandchildren around him, turn to a certain page, and say, "Children, this is the day I won the football game for Clemson University." On a warm September 14 day in front of 31,000 at Lane Stadium, Treadwell kicked a 36-yard field goal that barely cleared the crossbar on the game's final play to give the Tigers the victory. On the previous play Treadwell was short on a 41-yard attempt, but the Gobblers were called for roughing the kicker which gave Treadwell another chance. It was the first time he had ever played in a organized football game. Behind 17-10, VPI scored a touchdown on a fourth down play late in the final quarter to set up Treadwell's boot.

Clemson 13, Georgia 20

In front of a national television audience, Brent Musberger, Ara Parsegian, and the second largest crowd in Death Valley history, the Georgia Bulldogs pulled their usual trick — they got lucky. Midway through the fourth quarter, Bulldog center Peter Anderson recovered a fumble in the end zone after a mad scramble for the ball to give the visitors in red pants the triumph in front of a CBS audience. Clemson had taken a 13-0 lead on a 40-yard field goal by Treadwell, but the Bulldogs battled back with 10 points to grab the victory. Jim Riggs caught a 43-yard touchdown

Clemson played solid defense but had no offense in a conference loss in front of 79,309 at Death Valley. Coach Ford said the game was a "total failure offensively," and that "this was the sorriest football game that I have ever coached."

Clemson 7, Kentucky 23

Same old story: Georgia Tech II, The Sequel. Seven Tiger turnovers killed Clemson as the Tigers struggled offensively in a loss before 58,230 at Lexington's Commonwealth Stadium. Ray Williams ran 25 yards on reverse for Clemson's only score.

Clemson 27, Virginia 24

Coach Ford and his staff scrapped Clemson's offensive strategy of the early season and returned to a familiar game plan for Clemson's 25th victory over the Cavaliers without a loss. The Tigers used the old "up the middle, sweep right, sweep left, stop me if you can" offensive for 299 yards rushing, with Flowers and Stacey Driver each gaining over 100 yards. Freshman Rodney Williams quarterbacked the Tigers to three touchdown marches of more than 80 yards, and he threw for 105 yards. Flowers ran 12 yards off the right side in the fourth quarter for the winning tally. Ray Williams threw 29 yards for the winning tally. Ray Williams threw 29 yards to Terrance Roulhac off a reverse for a touchdown, and Roulhac ran 26 yards on a revenge play for the Tigers' other touchdown. The Tigers overcame Virginia leads three times in the Homecoming contest played before 79,110 at Death Valley.

Kenny Flowers used his amazing speed for touchdown runs of 46 and 50 yards in the first quarter, and Clemson held on after that to capture its second conference victory before 31,800 at Duke's Wallace Wade Stadium. Flowers used some good blocking by the offensive line and his speed to go 46 yards on Clemson's first possession. On the last play of the quarter, Flowers burst off the right side and down the sideline for a 50-yard touchdown. Terrence Flagler ran 28 yards for the Tigers' other touchdown.

four State passes and sacked Wolfpack quarterbacks eight times to send Clemson to a Textile Bowl victory at Death Valley before 72,316. Driver gained 121 yards on 25 carries, and Flowers scored three touchdowns and gained 70 yards. The Tiger offense had no turnovers as it continued to improve its tailback oriented strategy. The Clemson defense had six sacks for minus 45 yards in the first quarter. Michael Dean Perry, who was hurt much of the season, had seven tackles, two pass deflections, a caused fumble, and a sack. Mark Drag had nine tackles, including two sacks.

Clemson 26, Wake Forest 10

Kenny Flowers led the Tigers to another conference win at Memorial Stadium but with this victory came a big loss. Senior standout Steve Berlin, who entered the game with 67 tackles, was injured on the first play of the game and suffered torn knee ligaments, ending his career at Clemson. For Clemson, Driver gained 114 yards on 28 attempts, and Rodney Williams completed 10 passes for 147 yards. The victory gave Clemson a 5-3 record and pushed the Tigers closer to a bowl bid.

Clemson 20, North Carolina 21

The Tigers deserved better than this. After Clemson held a seemingly safe 17-7 lead early in the fourth quarter, UNC's William Humes scored from one-yard out with just 10 seconds remaining to cap Carolina's victory rally and basically end Clemson's ACC title

This one was tough. The Tigers put so much into the game, led throughout, ran basically at will, blocked punts, intercepted a pass, caused a fumble, . . . and lost. Clemson led 10-0, 24-14, and 31-24 against an experienced team that was leading the ACC. But as night enveloped Death Valley, Maryland's Stan Gelbaugh drove the Terrapins, seemingly completing every pass he threw. With only minutes remaining, he drove Maryland 78 yards to the Tiger 2. There, with a play Tiger fans will remember as vividly as Jerry Butler's 1977 USC touchdown catch but with a different feeling, Ferrell Edmunds made a questionable touchdown "catch", after the 25-second clock had run out and after Ric Badanjek had moved — two things that weren't called by officials but were apparent on the replay. team, was unable to move them. Maryland got the ball back, then drove to set-up Dan Plocki's winning 20-yard field goal. Danny Ford was later placed on probation for arguing on the field, and several Tiger players were suspended for hitting a Maryland player on the Clemson sideline after time had expired. Clemson blocked two punts in the first half and returned one for a touchdown. Flowers ran for 120 yards and scored once. Driver, Perry Williams, and Tracy Johnson also scored touchdowns for the Tigers.

riding on the outcome, the Tigers overcame an early Gamecock lead and held on in the end to capture "braggin rights" at Williams-Brice Stadium before a record crowd of 75,026. Carolina's bid to become the third consecutive team to rally by the Tigers was snuffed out when Perry Williams intercepted a Mike Hold pass with 4:43 remaining at the Clemson 15. Carolina had moved out to a 14-3 early second quarter lead, but Clemson fought back with Treadwell nailing a 49-yard field goal, and Flowers going two yards for a score. Clemson converted a Gamecock fumble into a Flowers touchdown early in the third quarter and then held on to win. After the contest, the Tigers accepted an invitation to play in the Independence Bowl, Clemson's first bowl in four years.

Ray Williams raced down field all alone, leaving his would-be defenders in the chilly darkness behind him as he sped toward the end zone. For an instant, all the losses and disappointments of the season seemed past seemed insignificant — Ray Williams was wide open for a sure touchdown, the Tigers were going to leave Shreveport winners.

Quarterback Rodney Williams let the ball fly; downfield, Ray broke into a hard sprint. The ball was high. Ray went up high but couldn't get high enough as the ball sailed over his outstretched hand incomplete. Ray fell to the turf without the ball and with him fell the Tigers' last chance of winning the Independence Bowl.

The road to Williams' desperate attempt seemed to mirror the Tigers' 1985 season with turnovers and miscues early, relative success in the middle, and virtual self destruction in the end.

The Tigers' first play from scrimmage brought back memories of a Tiger offense that sputtered its way through its first three games as Ray Williams fumbled after catching a short sideline pass. Clemson would go on to turnover the ball on its next two possessions and trailed 10-6 at the half. As in the middle portion of the season, Clemson took to the ground with tailback Kenny Flowers slashing through the Gopher defense for five and six yards an attempt. It was behind the running of Flowers and senior Stacy Driver that the Tigers crept back into the game and eventually took the lead 13-10 late in the third period.

In the end, it came down to the Tigers' inability to hold a lead, as they allowed the Gophers to score 10 unanswered points to steal away the victory. There were no game-saving plays in Shreveport, no last-minute heroics to pull out the win, only missed opportunities that left Ray Williams and rest of the Tigers grasping for answers.

THE EQUESTRIAN TEAM

On the Road to National Recognition

The Clemson University Equestrian Team is the latest venture of Clemson's chapter of Block and Bridle — a national organization dedicated to the promotion of animal agriculture. All team members must be active B & B members as the club supports them financially.

This was only the third year the team has competed but the quality of our riders is excellent as they have brought home many team championships. This year, Sally Floyd and Ellen Erhardt qualified for the regionals and both have an excellent chance of qualifying for the national championships.

Collegiate equestrian teams are under the auspices of the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association founded in 1967. According to its rules the country is divided into several regions which hold competitions within themselves during the school year. Classes, both hunt seat and stock seat, are broken into ten divisions based on the rider's proficiency and degree of experience. An increasing number of points are awarded from sixth to first place in every class and in order to progress to the next division a rider must accumulate fourteen points in his present one.

Before the last weekend in April each region holds a Regional Show and riders having won twenty-eight points in their divisions are eligible to compete. Regional winners are then able to go on to the National Show and vie for the championship.

These teams are actually two teams working together — a hunt seat team and a stack seat team.

After a hard day's ride, this equestrian proudly displays her trophy.

An equestrian competes in competition in the jump.

Intense concentration mark this rider and her horse in competition.

Each competes at its own shows but often the two are on the same day or weekend.

Riders that participate enjoy the comraderie and sense of friendly competition they find at the shows. Before the end of 1986 in will be Clemson's turn to host an area show. As this involves hiring a judge, running entries, laying courses, and supplying horses and tack it will be quite a job but the Clemson Equestrian Team is looking forward to it as another chance to excell.

SPIKERS MAKE THEIR PRESENCE FELT

Improvement And Maturity

Improvements and maturity are words that characterized the 1985 Clemson volleyball season as three starters from a year ago and a crop of talented newcomers helped the Lady Tigers finish their campaign with the best winning percentage since the 1982 season and finished as high as third place in two tournaments which is another feat that had not been accomplished in three years.

Clemson lost their first eight matches to start the season but the potential for improvement was evident with the outstanding play of veterans complemented with some talented freshman sent a signal that this squad would get better.

"This year proved to be valuable because we became familiar with one another's individual playing style."

— Captain Cindy Tucci

After two tough tournaments to start the season, Clemson picked up a win at state-foe Winthrop and defeated two teams in the Lady Eagle Invitational to finish third. Clemson then lost to state rivals South Carolina and Winthrop before losing to Southwest Texas and ACC foe Maryland. A spark then began to kindle for the Tigers as they won nine of the next twelve matches. This string of wins started with an exciting win over Temple at College Park, Maryland in five games. Clemson then lost to Georgia at home before winning five straight matches. These wins included home wins over Wake Forest and Furman, and Central Florida Tournament victories over Stetson, Central Florida and South Alabama. Clemson then lost to Alabama-Birmingham and Florida International which placed the Tigers third in the Central Florida Tournament. Clemson picked up a win over Furman and upset highly regarded Virginia and league member Georgia Tech. The Lady Tigers took a nose dive at the end of the season as Clemson lost to tough South Carolina and N.C. State before hitting tobacco road and coming up short at Duke and North Carolina. Clemson would also lose to Georgia and Western Carolina before whipping UNC-Charlotte and losing the season finale to Morehead State.

Clemson was ousted in the first round of the ACC tournament by Marland. Clemson finished the 1985 season with three ACC wins against 4 setbacks. Clemson also broke over twenty school records by individuals on the 1985 squad.

The Lady Tigers matured and steadily improved their play and built a solid foundation for next season's fortunes. The Tigers should be all "set" for a successful season.

Greg Moses ran the 200 Meters Run in a superior time of 20.41, and George Chiles ran the 400 Meters Run record was set by Mogens Guldberg with a time of 3:44.00. Dave Beacher set a new record for the 400 Meters Intermediate Hurdles with a time of 52.95. The long 10,000 Meters Run record was set by Martin Flynn in 30.26.95.

Sprinter Greg Moses said, "We didn't have much depth this season. Coach Williams came to Clemson late in the season and we just had a difficult time pulling ourselves together." Looking forward to next year, Moses said, "We have a lot of freshmen with a great deal of talent. As a team we should to much better in the NCAA meet. We're looking forward to next year's season!"

The Clemson Women tracksters were led by Tina Krebs, who placed in every major meet she ran in Kirsti Voldness also had an outstanding season. At the Penn State Invitational, Kristi Voldness ran the 800 meter-run in a time of 2:12.62 for a third place finish. Tina Krebs ran the same event in a time of 2:06.09 for a first place finish and set the time for the 1985 Clemson Women's Best Indoor Record. In the 1500 meter-run at the NCAA Indoor Championships, Tina Krebs and Kirsti Voldness once again took the first and third place finishes, respectively. While Krebs won the event with a time of 4:17.85 She set another 1985 Clemson Women's Indoor Best Record and shattered the existing women's collegiate record with a time of 4:10.20 at the Vitalis Invitational held at The Meadowlands in New Jersey. Her time nearly trimmed 10 seconds off the record set by Mary Decker eight years ago.

N.C. State University hosted the ACC Championships in which Judith Shepherd set a 1985 Clemson Women's Indoor Best Record in the 3000 meter-run with a time of 9:54.03. Anne Broe ran for a seventh place finish in the 5000 meter run and Elsa Breit came in fifth in the 1500 meter-run. Joanne Power, Trina and Tina Krebs both qualified to run in the 800 meter-run finals. Tina Krebs finished the event with a time of 2:05.79 for another win.

Tina Krebs earned the honor of All-American trackster at the NCAA Outdoor Championships at the University of Texas — Austin. She ran the 1500 meter-run in a time of 4:15.74 for a fourth place finish. Judith Shepherd failed to qualify for the 5000 meter-run finals, but she set a 1985 Clemson Women's Outdoor Best Record in this same event with a time of 16:22.67 at the Drake Relays in Des Moines, Iowa.

Coach Wade Williams came to Clemson in the spring from Virginia Military Institute to fill the vacancy left by Sam Colson. In an interview, Coach Williams expressed his desire to enlarge the women's track program to include more field events. With returning tracksters Tina Krebs, Trina Krebs, Kirsti Woldness, and Joanne Power, Coach Williams was anticipating a more successful season next year.

Coach Eddie Griffin's third year at the Tiger helm was a very successful one. His squad featured 2 returning ACC champions on Joey McKenna and Mark Litts and a handful of other wrestlers who had the talent to contribute to the program. At the end of the season, the team finished with a strong 16-6 record, which included wins over such national powers as Nebraska, Indiana, and Notre Dame.

The season began on November 13th as the Tigers hosted UT-Chattanooga. Clemson looked strong as they defeated UTC 30-13. They then moved on to the Ohio Open where they finished 7th out of 36 teams.

The Tigers opened December with a 25-13 loss to traditional power Iowa State. On December 6th, they defeated Carson Newman 42-6, and finished out the month with a first place win in the Sunshine Open in Orlando, Florida. The Tigers then remained in Florida to participate in the Sunshine Duals. There the tigers won four straight matches by defeating Stetson, Central Oklahoma, Navy, and Central Florida.

The Tigers returned home on January 7th when they hosted national power Nebraska. The Tigers pulled off the upset by a score of 23-19. On January 10-11th, the team participated in the Virginia Duals Invitational in Hampton, Virginia. There the Tigers defeated Cal-Poly and Indiana but lost to national powers Northern Iowa and Oklahoma. The Tigers returned home on January 13th to face Maryland and they defeated the Terps by a score of 22-14. On January 18th, Clemson hosted the annual Tiger Duals Invitational where they defeated an exhibition match loss to Athletes in Action, the Tigers traveled north to Tobacco Road for important conference matches with North Carolina and NC State. The team had a rough trip as they lost both matches by a score of 36-6.

On February 8th, the Tigers traveled to South Bend, Indiana to take on Notre Dame and Purdue. The team defeated the Irish 26-18 but lost to the Boilermakers 27-18. The Tigers closed out the season by defeating Virginia and Duke at home by scores of 40-12 and 38-11 respectively.

RUNNING THE ROAD OF SUCCESS . . .

Under a New Coach

Clemson's men's and women's track teams opened their cross-country season at the Georgia State Invitational with both teams garnering a victory.

Freshman Ute Jamrozy led the Clemson team in her first collegiate appearance. She had a second place finish with a 17:31 time. Also finishing in the top ten were Joanne Power, Michele Kalikin, Helen Rogers, and Anne Broe. Kalikin was a freshman and Power was in her first cross-country season.

All-District III runner, Martin Flynn, paced the men's team with a second place finish of 25:24 for five miles. Behind Flynn were Jeff deAlmedia, Henrek Skov, Mike O'Horan, and Chris Schoen, all finishing in the top ten in the men's division.

Men's new head coach Wade Williams and women's coach Wayne Coffman were both "extremely pleased with the results."

Coffman's women's track team brought home its second consecutive victory of the season in a meet with the University of North Carolina, Brigham-Young University, and Wake Forest. The Tigers tied first with BYU with a total of 42 points.

Runner Tina Krebs paced the Tigers with her first place finish of 17:08.4. Ute Jamrozy also per-

At the Furman Invitational, both the men's and women's teams placed well. The men, led by Martin Flynn, landed a victory, while the women finished a close second to Kentucky.

Both teams faced tough competition at the Atlantic Coast Conference cross country championships in Raleigh, NC. The Lady Tigers came home with a second place finish, while the men finished third in their division.

Ute Jamrozy paced the women's team with her individual finish of third at 17:02.9. Clemson had 75 team points.

UNC's George Nicolas set a course record of 24:20.6 with his first place victory, but Clemson's Martin Flynn finished with a close second of 24:53.3. Clemson finished in third place with 84 points.

Horace Grant, surrounded by Yellowjackets, goes up for two.

The theme for this year's edition of Tiger basketball was "Our Mission is Transition." Inherent in that theme for Clemson is the ultimate goal of transforming the Tigers from ACC cellar occupant to conference contender. Although the immediate results of this goal have not been realized as yet, the Tigers made great strides this season, gaining valuable experience from a 29-game schedule which saw them place third in Hawaii's Rainbow Classic in late December and begin the conference schedule with 12-1 record.

However, their ACC opponents proved to be less kind than the rest of the country as the Tigers dropped 11 of 14 conference games, finishing a disappointing seventh in the league going into the conference tournament. This does not indicate that Clemson cannot win in the ACC was but that the ACC was extremely competitive this year. The ACC placed five teams in the top twenty during the season. Three of those, Duke, Georgia Tech, and North Carolina, remained in the top five rankings for most of the year. All three were ranked No. 1 at some point this season.

The Tigers opened the season with nine straight wins at home which included the IPTAY Tournament championship against East Tennessee State in the first round and South Florida in the championship game. Clemson placed three players on the All-Tournament team. Glen Mc Cants and Grayson Marshall joined MVP Horace Grant on an elite group of six players representing all four teams.

After two more victories following the IPTAY tournament, Clemson hosted arch-rival South Carolina and came away with a hard-fought 73-66 overtime win over the Gamecocks. Horace Grant established his place as one of the best power forwards in the country during this win by scoring 17 points and pulling down 17 boards.

The Tigers stood at 9-0 when they faced last year's Southwest Conference champions, Texas Tech, in their first road game of the season. Clemson's Larry Middleton hit a 20-footer with four seconds left to clinch the Tigers tenth victory of the season. The Tigers had yet another challenge in front of them as they traveled to Hawaii to test their skills against some of the top teams in the country, which included last year's national champion, Villanova.

Clemson's first opponent, Bradley, has since proven to be one of the top teams in the nation, sporting the best regular season record in the country at 29-1. Senior Glen McCants had one of his best performances of the year, scoring 14 points and grabbing 12 rebounds as he led the Tigers to a 81-76 first-round win.

Clemson then suffered its first loss of the season as they were handed a 69-64 defeat by Missouri. However, the Tigers bounced back the next night with a 69-62 win over Seton Hall in the consolation game.

After a very successful road trip which saw the Tigers win three of four games, Coach Cliff Ellis brought his team home to begin what proved to be a much tougher conference schedule than expected.

The perennially tough Deacons provided little opposition as the Tigers overwhelmed Wake 91-64. The 27-point margin of victory was Clemson's largest in an ACC game since the Tigers bested Duke 100-66 in 1975.

However, Clemson celebrated a little too soon as the Tigers lost four straight, three to ACC opponents Virginia, N.C. State, and Georgia Tech and also a rematch with state rival South Carolina.

Coach Ellis regrouped his team and came back with another win over Wake. This time the Deacons proved to be much tougher, as the Tigers struggled to a 46-43 victory. But once again, Clemson lost whatever momentum they had going with this latest win and began a five-game losing streak — all to the ACC. This left the Tigers at 2-8 in the conference and 10-10 overall. If Clemson was to receive a post-season bid to a tournament they needed to win the next few games.

And win the next three is exactly what they did. The Tigers defeated a grossly-overmatched Florida A & M team 96-52. They then picked up their third ACC win of the season as the Tigers outmuscled the Maryland Terrapins 70-60. Although Maryland played without the help from All American Len Bias, Clemson clinched their 17th victory with a 75-57 shellacking of upstate-rival Furman.

The Tigers could have clinched an NCAA bid with a win over either over Virginia, No. 1 Duke, or No. 3 Georgia Tech. But it was not to be as the Tigers were defeated three times, ending their regular season at 3-11 in the conference and 17-13 overall.

ACC contests, they always seemed to have a shot at winning each time. Clemson lost to N.C. State by a total of seven points in both games, dropping the first in Raleigh 57-60 and then losing in overtime 69-73 at Littlejohn. The Tigers also lost a heartbreaker to Virginia at home 81-83 in their first conference loss of the season. The effort was there; a little luck here and a few breaks more there and the Tigers could have recorded their first 20-win regular season since 1979-80.

But there will be more twenty-win seasons in the next few years. Coach Ellis has provided the foundation for a great team to emerge next season. With all but three players returning and with the edition of fresh, eager blue-chip freshmen next season could be the year the Tigers cash-in in the experience they received from this disappointing season and command even more respect throughout the ACC than they gained this year.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

A Look at Two Ways Clemson Women Reach Their Potential

It was the spring of 1984 and Nancy Linn and Tracy Carver had a dream: to start a Clemson's Women's Soccer Club. They worked diligently and by the fall, the club was established.

Two years later, the dream continues with a team that is strong with 25 players. Kate Bunting and Lynn Thornton, along with Linn, provide leadership for this up and coming team.

Linn's original expectation's for the club was to "get everyone together ... maybe win a few games." Winning games had not been a problem for the team as several varsity and excellent club teams have fallen victim to the Lady Tigers. Rigorous practices ensure full use of these ladies talents.

The spring season consists of ten matches that include such powerhouses as Erskine, N.C. State, University of Georgia (their SAT's tend to be higher than those of their football team), Georgia Tech, University of Virginia and James Madison.

Amidst all of this great competition, fun and togetherness are not lost in the shuffle. No primadonnas here as all must finance their own way through school. However, lack of scholarships hasn't deterred the Lady Tigers from getting enthusiastic and good-quality players.

Head Coach Joseph Nash, a former goalie for Coach Ibrahim's Tigers lends his expertise to the squad. Nash led the ladies to a .500 fall season and is setting his sights on a very productive spring outing. Occasionally Coach Nash is assisted by Seth Kulla, another former Tiger and Terry Riggans who is the manager.

An important concern of the Lady Tigers is whether the team will ever go varsity. Cindy Gross, a senior for Clemson aptly expresses the situation. "Clemson needs more women's varsity sports. If soccer was added, it would incorporate more women in sports and give them more exposure in the sports world." Adds Diane De Lucia, a senior player, "Unfortunately Clemson tends to be behind by about 10 or 15 years when it comes down to innovation and change of any sort, much less help in encouraging women, especially women athletes, to advance to their male counterparts level. The male hierarchy at Jervey just oozes the attitude of not taking women athletes seriously. In Clemson, women have to prove themselves again and again in athletics, but that is O.K. because our capabilities are excellent. It's just a waiting game to see when people will wake up and support the Women's Club."

Across the country soccer is a varsity sport for men and women. The interest is there nationally and locally. However, despite this issue of varsity status, the Lady Tigers get down to business and are working hard for continued success, athletically and academi-

A quick mention should be made of a phenomena that keeps the women and men, athlete or not in "fighting" shape. The aerobics run in Fike Recreation Center has been a huge success with all age levels and abilities. The thing that is most impressive is the fact that beginners can improve themselves and be able to stand proudly next to an athlete and become as physically fit or maybe even more so. The women who run and coordinate the program have put many a varsity athlete to shame as these ladies lead and shout instructions for an hour while many die on the breeze. Kudos to all involved.

Melinda Ashworth looks to set up the play.

Playing in the periennly tough Atlantic Coast Conference, Clemson's Lady Tiger basketball team suffered through its second losing campaign in 11 years. Coach Annie Tribble's cagers went 12-16 and wound up in a tie for sixth place during regular season league play.

The tenth year mentor had the formidable task of merging four veterans with seven newcomers to challenge Clemson's most ambitious schedule ever. In fact, nine of Clemson's 19 opponents participated in either the NCAA or women's NIT. She utilized a lineup that was dominated by freshmen, as the Tiger roster included a pair of seniors, two juniors, one sophomore and six rookies.

Clemson opened the season against the nation's number-two ranked club, the Lady Bulldogs of Georgia. Clemson's 19-point setback to Georgia marked only the third time that a Lady Tiger squad had began a season with a loss. The next game proved to be just as challenginng as Clemson had to rally from 10 points down with 12:54 remaining to pick up their first win of the season, a 77-26 win at Virginia Tech.

Next step for the Lady Tigers was Lexington, KY for the University of Kentucky Invitational. It was Clemson's 23rd regular season tournament appearance and the Tiger's third consecutive Thanksgiving Tournament. Middle Tennessee State nipped the Tigers 90-88 in the semifinals to send Clemson into the consolation finals against Cleveland State. The Tigers ripped State 104-72 for third place and in the process established several new Lady Kat Invitational records.

The State victory began a string of six consecutive wins for the Tigers, which would wind up their longest win streak of the season.

Clemson's final win before Christmas break came at Georgia Tech as Tribble's cagers won 90-80 to keep their string of wins over the Yellow Jackets perfect at 11-0. The final two games of the 1985 portion of the schedule were on the road and the Tigers did not fare so well. The Wolfpack of N.C. State held the Tigers at bay, 76-72, in Raleigh, NC and Tennessee Tech bested Clemson 85-78 in Cookville, TN, to drop the Lady Tigers to 7-4 heading into 1986.

The New Year was not so kind to Clemson. January proved to be a miserable month as Clemson won just once in seven games. Their six game losing streak was the longest in Tiger history.

A month passed before the Tigers finally won another game and, ironically, it was against the same Georgia Tech squad by a score of 84-73. Unfortunately the Tigers were embarking on another six game losing streak.

Taking a breather from the rigors of the ACC schedule, Clemson's final month of regular season play began with a four-game road swing to four different states.

Then, with seven games remaining on the schedule the Tigers could afford to lose only one more game if they were to avoid a losing campaign. However that was not to be as losses at Duke (80-76) and Maryland (62-59) ended the Tiger's hopes of ending the regular season above .500.

Clemson did finish the season with a flourish, winning four of their last five outings, including a stunning 80-65 upset of 13th ranked North Carolina in Tigertown.

Heading into the ACC Tournament with a 12-15 overall record and 4-10 ACC mark, the Tigers needed another upset win over the Tar Heels, and a good showing in the tournament to earn a post-season berth. For awhile it looked as if the Tigers hopes would materialize. The Tigers lead by as much as 10 points with 12:58 left to play in the game. But, in the final 5:14 remaining in the game, the Tigers failed to score and lost the contest 88-83. The season was over, sending the Tigers home to rest and to start working for next season.

CLEMSON'S SWIM TEAMS EXCEL

Another Brilliant Season

Duplicating the tremendous success enjoyed by the Tiger swim team of a year age turned out to be an enormous challenge for Coach Bob Boettner's 10th Tiger edition. In meeting the challenge the men captured its first ever ACC title as the women recorded its sixth straight third place finish. In a much reversed order the men finished the regular season with a 3-5 record and the women ended up with an impressive 5-2 mark as its defeats came from the hands of top ten ranked UNC and Georgia. Clemson dominated postseason honors as Boettner brought home both the Men's and the Women's Coach of the Year Awards. Pam Hayden secured her bid on the 1986 Swimmer-of-the-Year Award as she was high point swimmer during the championships and Chuck Wade notched his name in the Clemson record books as he seized his second consecutive Driver-of-the-Year Award.

Bobby Robinson

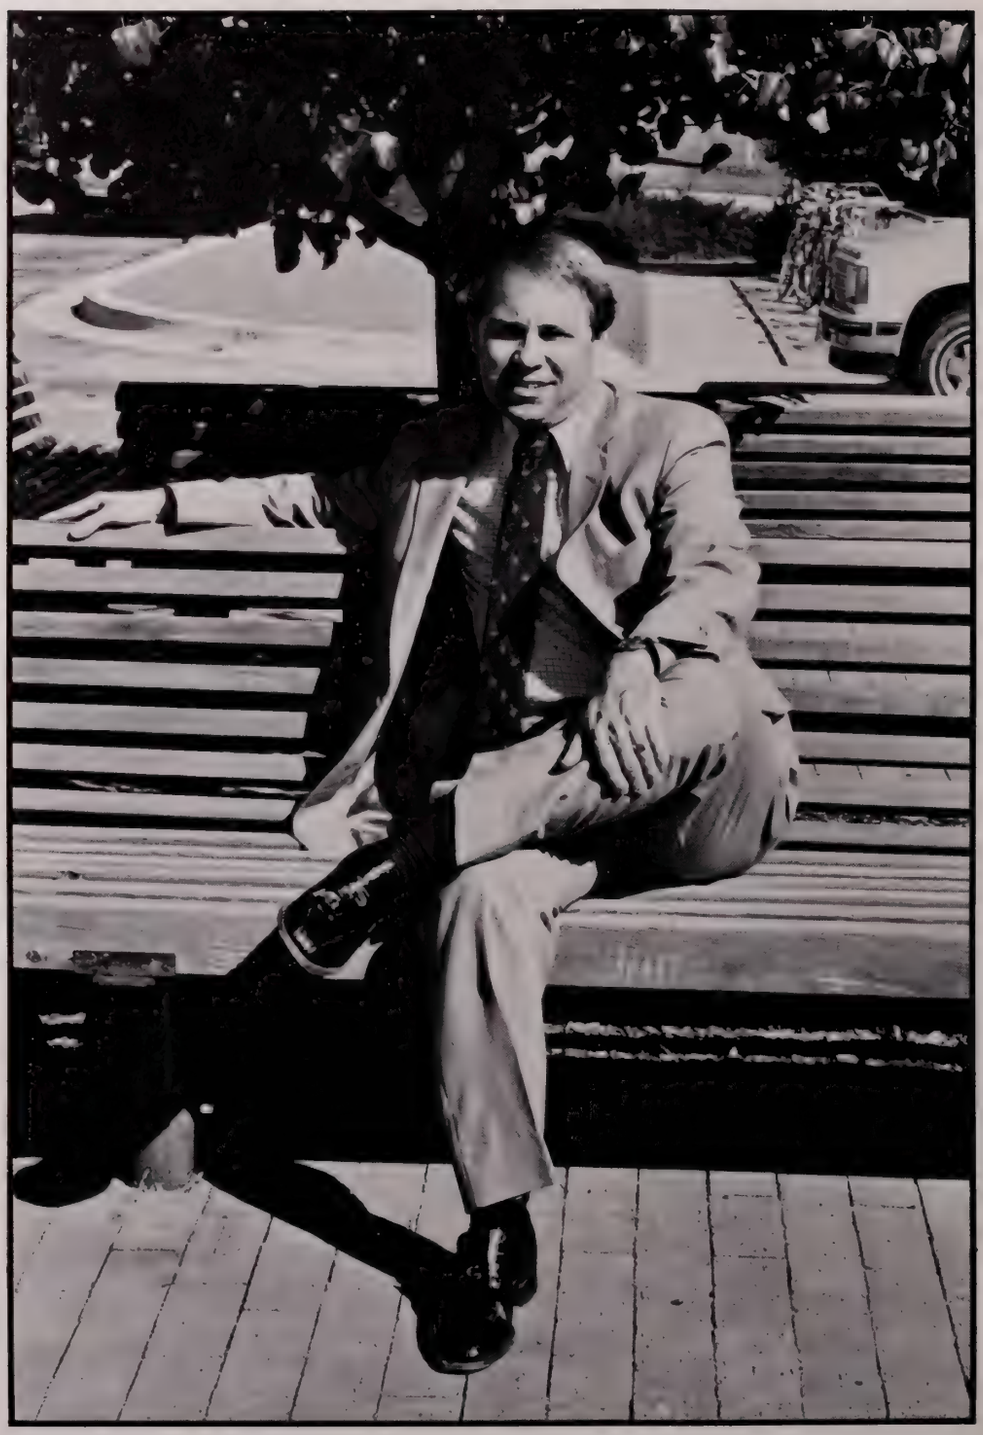
Beginning of a New Era

Bobby Robinson did not take the typical path to his athletic director job at Clemson. Most Clemson athletic directors have either been legendary coaches or former Tiger football players.

But Robinson took an alternate route, and he took it quickly. After graduating from Furman in 1968, Robinson came to Clemson in 1970 to work in the housing office. "I came to Clemson to work in athletics," Robinson said. "No opening existed at the time so I had to wait until one opened up." Robinson moved to the athletic department in 1973. There he steadily climbed up the ranks; until he was named athletic director in March of 1985 at the age of 39.

Robinson seems to have been a steading influence at the athletic department — a part of the University that has been through some rocky times in recent years. "We have a solid base in all areas," he said, "and we are a very solvent athletic department. In the short term the main thing we want to do is get our philosophies across to our people. We need to do what is right, stay within the rules, and be a positive aspect of this University. As long as we are within the University structure, we do report to people, and we are not different from anybody else — we can be a positive factor for this University.

Bobby Robinson speaks frankly about Clemson Athletics.



All photos by Patricia A. Summers

"We're going to be as good as we can be and give our coaches and athletes the opportunity to compete and be successful. That is the primary goal from an athletic point of view."

Robinson was a successful golf coach at Clemson for several years, so he probably expects good things from his coaches. While he was head coach, the Tigers won their only Atlantic Coast Conference title in golf, and they participated in the NCAA tournament three times. In 1983 his Tiger team finished fifth in the nation.

This year Robinson announced some new athletic facilities that should aid the Tiger cause. Plans for a multi-purpose tennis complex and a refurbished soccer stadium were announced in the fall. "We have great facilities," said Robinson. "We need some others. As time permits, we will do what we can do."

While Robinson did not take the most direct road to the Clemson athletic's post, he said that he's happy the way things have turned out. "I never actively sought the athletic director position at Clemson," he said. I just believe if you are meant to get a position and you work hard, you will get it. Things worked out here, and I'm glad they did."

Trailin the Tiger

From Then to Now

The Clemson Tiger is one of the most colorful mascots in all of college football. It has been thirty years since he has made his first appearance at Death Valley. Since then he has been a familiar face at practically every Clemson event. At games, he performs his antics by hanging out on goalposts, marching in visiting school's bands, kissing homecoming queens, and getting in all sorts of mischief.

The Tiger's tail is a prize sought after at almost every away game. It was during the UVA game of 1957 when some Virginia fans charged after our beloved Tiger and tore off his tail. All that remained was a hole which revealed his blue and white polka-dotted underwear.

Tiger mascot Zack Mills started a new tradition in the fall of 1978 by doing pushups for every point scored. Mills established a new NCAA single season mark record of 1,334 pushups in 12 games. After two seasons, he went on to recover at Veterinary School in Georgia. Mills turned his stripes over to Ricky Capps who defeated his record with 1,755 pushups due to the success of the 1981 season. Capps will also be remembered for setting a new all time scoring record on Halloween Day 1981 when Clemson scored 82 points against Wake Forest.

Capps passed his reign over to Randy Faile for the 1982 season. Faile brought honor to the Tiger by becoming the National Universal Cheerleader Association Mascot-of-the-year. He was also the first to perform his duties overseas at the Mirage Bowl.

Although Jay Watson did not set any records during the 1984 season he brought fame by appearing on the same stage with President Reagan in Greenville. The title has now been passed down to David Friedman who will have some big paws to fill.

Many changes have revolved over the past few years due to the dedication of these men. And no

A Clemson Tale

Once Upon A Rock

Once upon a time not so very long ago there lived a rock. The rock lied deep below the sands of Death Valley California. It was one day picked up by an adventurer by the name of S.C. Jones who brought it back and gave it to his good friend Frank Howard.

Coach Howard placed the rock on a shelf in his office. As time went by he became disinterested in looking at the rock. He suggested that it be out back with nature. Instead, it received a new life when it was placed on a mounted pedestal at the top of the hill of Death Valley Stadium. Some believed it to contain mystical powers. As years passed, it came to symbolize the winning tradition and tenacity of Clemson football. This would certainly come true in 1981 when the Cinderella team went to the Orange Bowl after the rock had shown strength and confidence for an undefeated season. Today, football players still touch Howard's Rock for good luck.

The rubbing of the rock along with running down the hill are some of the most exciting 30 seconds in all of college football because of the color and pageantry. After the team warms up they return to the home dressing room in the West Stands. Ten minutes before kickoff two buses drive around the periphery of the Stadium to the East side of the field. The cannon then fires, they touch the rock, Tiger Rag is played, and Clemson charges down the hill onto the field. It is one of the most celebrated entrances in all of football. Because of these famous traditions Clemson is one of the most sought after places to play in the country. But we already knew that, didn't we?

GREEKS

The world of Greeks expanded to nineteen fraternities and eleven sororities. For reasons of their own, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority were not pictured in this year's TAPS.

Due to many inquiries, TAPS would like to clearly explain why Greeks and Organizations must pay for their group shots. The production of this TAPS cost in excess of $100,000 for a press run of 6,000 books. Normal sales accounted for approximately 80 percent and university funds about 5 to 10 percent. Thus, we raised the remaining 10 to 15 percent through sales of spreads to Greeks and Organizations.

On the lighter side, we included Anchor Splash as a two page spread like the other Greek festivals. We also introduced Alpha Phi Omega as a Greek, not as organization since the brothers of APO wanted the greater flexibility of a two page spread. We continued to offer the Greek Creative Photo contest, although apathy may kill the show next year. Only the sorority, Delta Sigma Theta, entered this year. Eight fraternities entered the photo contest. Sigma Alpha Epsilon won the best overall theme and Alpha Gamma Rho won the best fraternity shot.

GREEK DAY

This year's Greek Day culminated another fun year of fraternity events and activities. Throughout the year the Greeks particiated and competed in various Interfraternity Council activities, including Homecoming displays, Tigerama skits, Intramural athletics, academics, and various Greek Week events. Along with the many Greek functions of the year comes enthusiastic and spirited competition, from which all fraternities benefit. Winners in these catagories are to be congratulated for their fine efforts. Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity took first place honors in the overall Homecoming competition, while the first place overall Greek sports trophy was won by Sigma Nu. In scholarship, Alpha Gamma Rho earned the highest grade point ratio among fraternities. Greek sing, one of the highlights of Greek Week, was won by Sigma Nu.

Greek Day, as always, was the high point of the spring semester. The Interfraternity Council's new regulations concerning alcohol consumption were very constructive in approaching the

DIXIE DAY

Each spring the sororities gather for an exhilarating week of competition culminating in Dixie Day. Dixie Day is sponsered by Beta Theta Pi Fraternity and the Interfraternity Council. Events of the preceeding week include the Miss Magnolia contest and its associated Sorority Sing. A member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority, Nancy Humphries was crowned Miss Magnolia 1985. Alpha Delta Pi Sorority won the Sorority Sing.

The Dixie Day events were preceeded throughout the year by various intramural activities including softball, football, basketball, tennis, spades, and backgammon. Points were awarded to each sorority based on final standings in each of these events. Kappa Delta Sorority was awarded first place in the athletic competition. Along with the sports competition, there is an award for the highest grade point ratio. Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority won the academics award.

Final standings were determined by the Dixie Day games. This year's challenges included a tug-of-war, an egg toss, a three-legged race, and various other crazy games. Points were awarded to the winners of each event, then totaled to determine

DERBY DAYS

Each fall, a special day known as Derby Days is held for sororities to gather in friendly competition. Sponsored by Sigma Chi Fraternity, Derby Days raises money for the United Way. This money is raised by selling tickets to the dance, selling ads, and raising money as votes for the Derby Queen. This year, Sigma Chi raised $4000.

On September 27, 1985, hundreds of girls met at the rugby field to participate in such crazy games as the egg drop, the izzy-dizzy relay, flour power, and the MYSTERY EVENT. The mystery event proved to be a killer, as the girls had to pass a large spoon up their bodies under their clothes.

After the games, the girls had a few hours of relaxation before the Derby Day dance. This year, the dance was held at the National Guard Armory. The band, Touch, rocked the house down and everyone had a good time.

At the dance, trophies were awarded to the sororities which earned the most points from the games. Alpha Delta Pi came in first, with Chi Omega second, and Kappa Alpha Theta third. Delta Delta Delta Sorority member Miss Vicki Neal was crowned Derby Queen.

ANCHOR SPLASH

The highlight of Greek competition during the Fall is Anchor Splash. Sponsored by the sisters of Delta Gamma to raise money for their philanthropy, Anchor Splash is a swim meet in which fraternities compete on the basis of spirit and swimming skills.

This fall marked the fourth year that Anchor Splash has been held at Clemson University. The events of Anchor Splash week began with the Mr. Legs competition. Fraternities and Sororities nominated their favorite candidates and the winner was chosen by a campus wide penny vote contest during the week. There were also Banner Day and Goodie Day during which the Delta Gamma coaches made banners to hang in the fraternity lounges and baked goodies for the brothers.

In anticipation of the night of the big swim meet, the Delta Gamma's held a party in Edgar's on Wednesday night to celebrate and have fun before the competition. Attendance at the Pre Splash party counted toward spirit points for the fraternities, and there was general fun and great times for everyone.

When Thursday night finally arrived, the swimmers and coaches gathered for some serious and some not so serious swimming. Some of the evenings events included the Granny Gown Race, the Coaches-Brothers Race, the Tasmanian Yoo-Hoo, the 50 yard Freestyle, and the 200 yard Medley Relay.

Competition was great and many supportive fans and brothers filled the stands in Fike to cheer their swimmers on. As the final event was completed and the last swimmers climbed from the pool, the winenrs were announced.

The brothers of Phi Delta Theta won the spirit Award, based on the number of t-shirt designs submitted, t-shirt sales, and Pre Splash Party attendance. The Mr. Anchor Splash title was won by Pat Leonard of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, and Eddie Brauder of Alpha Gamma Rho won Mr. Legs. The Phi Delt's won third place overall and the Kappa Sigma fraternity won second place overall. And finally, the brothers of Sigma Chi became the new Anchor Splash champions.

Enthusiastic participants of Anchor Splash found no time to shave in the busy week of preparation.

The Interfraternity Council is the governing body for the fifteen social fraternities at Clemson. During the past year the IFC has made a successful switch to dry rush and worked with the Pan-Greek and Panhellenic councils to raise over one thousand dollars for famine relief in Africa.

The IFC has also updated its structure by involving a greater number of fraternity members on committees and in planning processes. Finally, striving for self government, a new, more effective judicial system was formed. This new structure enabled the Greek system to grow faster than it has since its beginning over two decades ago.

The Clemson Panhellenic Council was composed of the president, delegate, and alternate delegate from each female fraternity or sorority on campus. There were nine National Panhellenic Conference fraternities which included Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Gamma, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, and Pi Beta Phi. Sorority women were housed in East Campus dorms.

The Panhellenic Council was the governing body for the sororities and served to coordinate formal rush, held at the beginning of the Fall semester; to promote high scholastic achievement, social and moral standards; to give service to the community, and to maintain harmony, equality, and unity among the women's fraternities at Clemson.

The Junior Panhellenic Council was comprised of presidents, delegates, and alternate delegates from each of the nine pledge classes. The main project was planning the Junior Panhellenic Pledge Dinner which provided an opportunity for all the pledges to meet.

The Theta Lambda chapter of Alpha Chi Omega was installed on campus on October 19, 1985, the month of its centennial. With chapters all across the United States, this was the first Alpha Chi chapter in the state of South Carolina. The first pledge class of 50 people was indispensible to the construction of the First Friday float entitled "It's Raining Paws On Dawgs." Other activities throughout their busy first year included a reception in the President's Mansion, Derby Day, Dixie Day, a Christmas Party, a Parent's Luncheon before the Maryland game, a Formal Red Carnation Ball, and a reception for the Awhnae of Alpha Chi Omega.

The Zeta Nu chapter of Alpha Delta Pi worked hard in 1985-1986 and should be proud of their many achievements. Alpha Delta Pi started off on the right foot this year by winning first place in the float competition for clubs and organizations in the First Friday Parade. However, their most prized achievement was being named the overall winner of Derby Days. The sisters worked the entire year raising money for the American Cancer Society with an Aerobathon and for the Arthritis Foundation through a diaper relay with Alpha Phi Omega fraternity. The major philanthropy, which comes in November, is the Ronald McDonald Houses for terminally ill children. The sorority capped off the year with the annual teeter totter marathon. Social events included an Alumni luncheon, a scholarship tea, a Sadie Hawkins dance, and a Formal. The sisters always found time to support Clemson by participating in many activities.

Alpha Gamma Rho is a national social and professional fraternity for men studying in any of the agriculture sciences. AGR builds better men by participating in a variety of fraternity and campus activities. AGR's hold offices in most clubs in the College of Agriculture and are involved in many campus organizations.

Alpha Gamma Rho has been successful in the First Friday parade and Homecoming displays for many years and have continued their success by placing first in each event.

AGR strives for high academic achievement, and during the past year, Alpha Gamma Rho had the highest grade point ratio among the fraternities on campus. The brothers of Alpha Gamma Rho take pride in their work and accomplishments and hope their association with Clemson and the Greek system will continue to grow in the future.

This year, Alpha Phi Omega was celebrating its 45th year of service to Clemson University and the surrounding community. Highlighting the year were service projects at the Shriners Hospital, Boys Home of the South, Camp Old Indian, and Tomassee Daughters of the American Revolution Childrens Home. Other service highlights included the Diaper Relay, a joint service project with Alpha Delta Pi benefiting the American Arthritis Association, the Second Annual Tiger Triathlon, and the student desk blotters. Alpha Phi Omega also sponsored and coordinated the Clemson University versus University of South Carolina blood drive that saw Clemson come out victorious not only as a percentage of the student body but also in total pints donated. In addition to service, APO had a full social calendar including Spring and Fall Formals, officiating Greek Day, Anchor Splash, a Caribbean Crash party, and mixers with Alpha Delta Pi, Kapa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Delta Delta Delta, and Delta Gamma.

The Alpha Tau Omega Tiger Paw calendar featured twelve beautiful Clemson co-eds was very popular again. The ATO's also kept busy constructing their moving display which won first place during Homecoming Week. The brothers continued to be very involved with many service projects to help less fortunate people.

The school year was highlighted by parties on football weekends, mixers, pre-game cookouts, rush week, and Greek Week. The ATO's beautiful Little Sisters supported them throughout the year and were always around to help out. The brothers ended the year with their annual Founder's Day Formal and a trip to Myrtle Beach to celebrate the school years end.

The Delta Nu chapter of Beta Theta Pi certainly had a full slate of fun for the year. Sponsoring Dixie Day, Sorority Sing, and Miss Magnolia in the Spring turned out to be a much enjoyed event.

The Betas had a fruitful season on the playing field during the year, boasting Interfraternity Council championships in soccer and football. Individual intramural titles were won by brothers to add to the laurels.

A "few" mixers and 12:01's made for some interesting fun at the Beta House for brothers, little sisters, and guests.

Chi Omega holds the distinction of being the nation's largest sorority with 167 active chapters and over 170,000 initiated members. The sorority was founded at the University of Arkansas on April 5, 1895 and the Psi Kappa chapter began at Clemson in 1970.

An important part of Chi Omega was community service. The Chi-O's have walked for the March of Dimes, played games with the children at the Collin's Children's Home, sponsored a child for Helping Hands at Christmas, sat in a tub with members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity for Muscular Dystrophy, and sung Christmas carols to the residents of Clemson Downs Retirement Center.

Chi-O's were members of various organizations ranging from Student Government to Central Spirit, the Ski Club, and Rally Cats to name a few. For three of the last four years, Miss Clemson has been a Chi Omega. They were also members of almost every honorary organization including Blue Key, Mortar Board, and Phi Kappa Phi.

The Beta Theta chapter of Delta Delta Delta has been on the Clemson campus since 1970. With 120 active sisters and 50 pledges, they were the largest sorority on campus.

In the Spring, Tri-Delta awarded two academic scholarships to outstanding women. Money for the scholarships was raised by a drawing for prizes donated by local businesses. The Superdance, which they co-sponsored with Pi Kappa Alpha, was a big success. All the proceeds were donated to Muscular Dystrophy.

Throughout the year, Tri-Delta's were involved in First Friday parade, the Pledge Formal, Dixie Day, and Derby Day. A sister, Miss Vicki Neal was crowned Derby Day Queen.

The DG's fourth Fall was filled with football games, parties, and Derby Days. In November, Delta Gamma hosted the fourth annual Anchor Splash, held to raise money for their philanthropies, Sight conservation, Aid to the Blind, and Grants and Loans.

Other events included the Christmas party, the Cream Rose Formal in the February, and the Annual Heartless Hannah Luau before Spring exams.

Socially, the year was a busy one. Band parties followed each home football game during the fall. Other events included the Kappa Alpha — Chi Omega Morning Mixer and the Little Sister Christmas Party. The traditional Mountain Weekend in North Carolina was another exciting event.

The biggest party of the year came in the spring with Old South on Hilton Head Island. This weekend was shared with Kappa Alpha Chapters from across South Carolina and consisted of a golf tournament, band parties, and a celebration of the antebellum South. Attendance at the Carolina Cup in Camden and a Bahamas Party round out the Spring calendar.

The founding of Kappa Alpha Psi took place on January 5, 1911 on the campus of Indiana University of Bloomington, Indiana. It was originally chartered as Kappa Alpha Nu on April 15, 1911 and on April 15, 1915 it was changed to Kappa Alpha Psi.

The Kappa Lambda chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity Inc., was founded on October 16, 1980 by seven men who sought a bond of brotherhood here at Clemson and nationally. The charter line name was "Clemson Crimson Seven." Since the founding of the Kappa Lambda chapter, forty seven outstanding men have joined the Kappa Alpha Psi bond. The chapter is constantly seeking to achieve and excel in every field as they assist in making life better for mankind.

On January 27, 1870 the first greek letter fraternity for women was formed at Asbury University. This new women's fraternity was known by the name of Kappa Alpha Theta, and it is still alive today at over 100 college campuses across the United States and Canada.

The Theta's joined forces with the brothers of Alpha Tau Omega in a 36 hour Rocking Horse-a-thon to benefit the Institute of Logopedics. The Institute is the national philanthropy of Kappa Alpha Theta and it helps children who have speech and hearing handicaps. Locally, the Theta's have helped the Clemson Child Development Center. This year's pledge class held a Swim-a-thon to raise money for the center, which helps underprivileged children in the area.

The Fall semester hosted events such as the Annual Crush Party, Derby Days, a Barn dance, and a Christmas Party at the Farmer's Hall in Pendleton. Spring semester started off grandly with the 1986 Winter Formal at the Hyatt Regency in Greenville, South Carolina. Various mixers and other parties dotted the semester.

The Epsilon Mu chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma received many campus awards. In the Spring, the Kappas captured the Dixie Day, trophy for the overall winner. The Kappas studied hard too. Their hard work resulted in highest scholarship among not only sororities but also pledge classes.

This year, the Kappa's chose a guy from each class to represent Kappa Kappa Gamma as Key Men. Their first task was helping out with the First Friday float. Keeping with the "Dog Day Afternoon" theme, the Kappa's chose "Clemson Vice" for their float. Their hard work paid off, Kappa's came in second. For their philanthropy project, Kappa's had continued success with the Kappa Calendar, raising money for Multiple Sclerosis.

Kappa Sigma's social calendar was as varied and colorful as its members. Fall semester parties centered around Rush and home football games with Homecoming week being the most exciting. In addition to those special events, several mixers, cookouts, and informal gatherings with the fraternity's Little Sisters and campus sororities were enjoyed by everyone. The traditional "Sweetheart Ball" formal and fraternity resort house weekend provided many memorable moments during the cold winter months of the second semester. The coming of springtime brought lots of warmth, but also the excitement and spirited competition of Greek Week and the Greek Day Games. As always, throughout the year, the Kappa Sigma biannual Buckwheat functions resulted in unique social events. Just like the plant that they are nicknamed for, the "Kudzoo Kids" seem to come back stronger and stronger each year.

OMEGA PSI PHI

Que Dogs

On November 17, 1911 three Howard University undergraduates, in company with their faculty advisor Dr. Ernest Everett Just, envisioned a medium through which they could stress friendship as a necessary component of life. To this end the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity was formed.

Initially, these four gentlemen sought only to exist as a viable organization in a region heavily enriched with Southern traditional — indeed, a region in which a secret Black organization would be suspect and wrongly identified as a militant faction. However, this misconception was put to rest as Omega grew to tens of thousands and directed its attention to uplifting humanity and giving free, creative expression to an enslaved people in this vast land of the free.

The Chi Zeta chapter at Clemson University was established April 6, 1974 as the first Black organization on campus. The original goals of these thirteen pioneers in 1974 were much akin to those of Omega's founders, but invariably as Chi Zeta grew and withstood the tests of time it gave its energies to campus and community involvement.

Projects such as our annual Gospel Extravaganza, a sponsorship of needy children both here and abroad, a Bowl-a-thon for charity, fundraisers for the United Negro College Fund, scholarship awards and many others firmly indicate that we have accepted Omega's challenge and established a stronghold in the Clemson area. "Friendship is Essential to the Soul."

Pi Beta Phi's ninth year on Clemson's campus proved to be as busy as ever, but this did not hinder the chapter's grades as they received the award for having the most improved chapter Grade Point Average and the second highest overall average.

The Pi Phi's service activities encompassed timing for the Clemson men's and women's swim teams, visits to the Collins Home for Halloween and Easter, and periodic visits to Clemson Downs, a local nursing home. Fundraisers included the Annual Kidnap Social and the Tuck-in.

Social activities included a four sorority band party with the sisters of Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Gamma, and Kappa Kappa Gamma, a Christmas semi-formal, a "CRUSH" party for our favorite fellas, a Spring formal, and a Spring band party.

Within the chapter the Pi Phi's had many firesides and candlelights, as well as a pledge retreat during September in Gatlinburg, Tennessee and a chapter retreat in Georgia during the Spring semester.

The beginning of classes in the fall meant only a continuation of hard summer work for the brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha. Throughout the summer, time was put toward the organization of the Pika sponsored First Friday parade. This year, CBS covered the parade with Brent Musberger and Ara Parseghian as special guests.

During Homecoming, the Pikas were hard at work with Tigerama and the still display. Once the Fall semester and football season passed, such fund raisers as the Superdance for Muscular Dystrophy occupied the brothers time. A little friendly competition, fun, and exercise added to produce fraternity sports in which Pi Kappa Alpha excelled.

Proof of hard work could be found at the national level. It was here that the Clemson chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha proved itself once again by receiving another Smythe award. This award, presented annually to the fifteen best chapters of the 176 chapters in the United States, was presented to the Pikas for the tenth time in fifteen years.

Pi Kappa Phi is the only national fraternity founded in South Carolina. It was founded at the College of Charleston in 1904. Here on the Clemson campus we began at Phi Alpha Sigma fraternity and became an associate chapter of Pi Kappa Phi two years ago.

Since that time we have grown. In the past semester, our membership has tripled. We hope to continue this growth and become a driving force on campus.

Socially, the Phi Delts centered their fall activities around the football season, with cookouts before games and parties afterwards. Homecoming was one of the year's highlights, with the Phi Delts placing second in the moving display competition and participating in Tigerama. The annual Christmas Party closed out the Fall semester in excellent fashion. In the Spring, the brothers enjoyed the Valentine's Day invitational band party, the Founders Day Formal held in Cashiers, North Carolina, Greek Week activities, and a week at Myrtle Beach.

The Phi Delta were competitive in intramural sports, winning the Interfraternity Council soccer championship and first place honors at Greek Day. Service projects are an important part of the Phi Delt activities, highlighted by the annual Spring Fever Run to benefit Lou Gehrig's Disease. The Phi Delts also participated in the Alpha Delta Pi's teeter totter marathon and the Whitten Village dance.

Nationally, the chapter received the Gold Star Award for the fifteenth straight year, reaffirming their place as one of the top ten chapters in the nation.

The brothers of Phi Gamma Delta (Fiji) participated in the homecoming float competition and received graduate brothers at the Fall Homecoming Formal.

In the Spring, the Fiji's held their third annual Easter Egg Hunt for the children at Morrison Elementary Annex. April is the Highlight month for the brothers. It begins with the Greek Day celebration. They usually follow Greek Day by reassociating themselves with the graduates within the area at the annual Frank Norris Pig Dinner. The season is capped off by the Fiji Island Weekend on Lake Hartwell.

Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc. was an international social service organization which was founded on January 9, 1914, at Howard University. Our principles are Brotherhood, Scholarship, and Service, with our motto being "Culture for service and service for humanity". We conduct service projects on a national and local level.

On the national level, we work with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban League, the National March of Dimes Foundation, and the Boy's Club of America. On the local level, the Omicron Lambda chapter of Phi Beta Sigma, which was founded on April 15, 1984, service projects have included visiting the Six Mile Retirement Center, giving a Halloween Party at the Oconee Convalescent Home and having a car wash from which the proceeds were donated to Muscular Dystrophy.

In addition to doing service projects, Phi Beta Sigma has sponsored several social events during the past year. The social events were on campus gatherings in the Palmetto Ballroom. Also, we held Sigmafest, a joint celebration involving members of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority and Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity from the southeastern states. We celebrated our Founder's Week program in January, attending church with the ladies of Zeta Phi Beta, and we set up a Sigma Display in the Loggia during this week.

They hold a Tub-a-thon with Chi Omega to benefit Muscular Dystrophy. The brothers also built the float to carry the Homecoming Queen and her court. The SAE Little Sisters were an active group. Four of the last five Homecoming Queens and four of the ten finalists this year were SAE little sisters.

This fall Sigma Phi Epsilon began its fifteenth year at Clemson University with a brotherhood of one hundred and five. Utilizing this large number of brothers, the Sig Eps participated in many service, social, and campus activities. Thriving on diversity, the fraternity which consists of brothers from all over the east coast, successfully competed in many intramural and Interfraternity Council sports. In addition, the Sig Eps participated and placed in the Homecoming display contest.

Highlighted by both parties and sorority mixers, the Spring social activities were concluded with a Sweetheart Formal at Litchfield and a week long blow out at Myrtle Beach following exams.

Theta Chi celebrated it's fifteenth anniversary this past year with as much enthusiasm as ever. Family and friends enjoyed themselves at the various social functions including the Barbarian Party,"Mr. Bubble", PJ-PJ, and the tenth annual "Return to Guyana Party."

Keeping with the tradition of "The Helping Hands", Theta Chi's again volunteered for the South Carolina Heart Fund, collecting at area shopping centers.

Brothers and new pledges gathered at the semi-annual wilderness weekends to discuss fraternity goals and get to know each other.

Alumni return in the late spring for the "Red Carnation Ball" and Greek Games to participate in year end festivities.

Leading the brothers were David Grossman, President; Chris Williams, Vice-President; Chuck Zollinger, Treasurer and Pledge Marshall; Mike Kellas, Secretary; and Richard Willems, First Guard.

ORGANIZATION'S DAY '85

All photos by Patricia A. Summers

Several students take a closer look at the Race Car Club exhibit during Organizations Day.

WSBF, the University Radio Station, gives a remote broadcast at Organizations Day.

Each fall with the onset of a new semester, a tradition has developed. In the first week of September, Student Government set aside a day devoted to introducing both new and continuing students to the various organizations on campus.

All of the approximately 260 recognized campus organizations were invited to participate. It gave each the time to talk to students on a one-to-one basis. Thus, it helped to familiarize them with the many opportunities offered at the University.

This annual event was held along the Senior Walk between Tillman and Riggs Hall. It was felt that this location provided easier access for students, and added to an informal atmosphere.

This year many clubs went far beyond just setting up information tables. There was a wide variety of tactics used in order to capture the attention of prospective members. Observers watched fencing duals, learned the procedures of milking cows, took first-hand looks at airplanes, sailboats, and racing cars, awed over the intricacy of precisely built "minature" cities, and other novelties.

All of these extra efforts helped in making Organizations Day '85 the biggest success ever!!!!

The BASKETBALL PEP BAND was an ensemble comprised of various musicians directed by Dr. Richard Goodstein. Members of the Pep Band are comprised of those who are in the Jazz Ensemble plus expanded instrumentation for more upbeat, modern music. The Pep Band performed at all home men's basketball games and some selected women's home games. Bandsmen who were not in the Jazz Ensemble had to audition for their seats within their respective sections. The Pep Band also traveled to Greensboro, North Carolina to play at the ACC Tournament.

Organized in 1969, The UNIVERSITY CHORUS was a formal concert ensemble, dedicated to the study and performance of a wide variety of choral music and emphasized developing a high degree of excellence both musically and from the standpoint of expressive communication with audiences.

Under the direction of Mr. William Campbell, the Chorus performed many functions on and off campus. They sang during pre-game ceremonies of all home football games and during halftime of the Homecoming game against Virginia. They performed two formal concerts in Tillman Hall and went on tour of the Knoxville, Tennessee area. The Chorus also sang Christmas Carols in Harcombe Plaza and a small contingent sang the National Anthem and the

Among the other choral ensembles are the MEN'S and WOMEN'S GLEE CLUBS. These groups performed at university functions such as banquets, dinners and also for visiting dignitaries and VIP's. Membership was on a voluntary basis and also served to expand the reading abilities of the performers. Concert literature included traditional glee club songs based heavily on harmonies.

A group that was more suited for large scale entertainment was the FOUR THIRTY THURSDAY SINGERS. The Singers, which are more jazz and Broadway oriented, served not only as entertainment, but also as a public relations group for Clemson. They participated in a show choir festival at Winthrop College, the Miss Clemson Pageant, and during Spirit Blitz's "World's Largest Pep Rally" before the Maryland Football game. Other choral groups include the Madrigal Choir which perform Renaissance type music; and the Barber Shop Quartets, based on four part harmonies.

The CLEMSON DANCERS was a recognized organization open to anyone interested in the dance medium. The purpose of the club was to introduce and broaden the skills of dance students through practice and mutual assistance and to further heighten interest in dance.

Monthly meetings were held to inform members of activities planned by the Dancers. Some of these activities included attending dance conventions in Myrtle Beach, sponsoring guest artists, attending dance related events as a group, electing a representative to the Homecoming pageant, and encouraging participation in the dance classes offered at Fike Center.

As a service to the university, the Clemson Dancers provided free dance classes of all levels in jazz, tap, and ballet. These classes were open to anyone with an activities card or a membership to Fike. The Kinetic Theater was the performing part of the Clemson Dancers. New members are chosen in September and they worked hard to prepare for fall performances and classes at Fike.

The CLEMSON PLAYERS have delighted audiences with their dramatic productions for over twenty-five years. Originally performing in the Plant and Animal Sciences Auditorium and in the Amphitheatre, and anywhere else an audience could gather, they now call Daniel hall and its Annex home.

The Players present two full-stage productions each semester and two in the summer. Their repertoir has ranged from musical comedy to the classics, covering every dramatic form in between, including the original works by new playwrights.

In recent years, the Clemson Players have received national recognition for the excellence of their work. Advanced at the state level in the American College Theatre Festival competition for the past three years, they were one of six university companies in the country invited to perform at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in 1984.

The Clemson Players was open to everyone for performances, meeting, and auditions; there were no requirements or dues for membership. Students, faculty, staff, and others participated and attended these outstanding performances.

The GOSPEL CHOIR was founded in 1979 by 20 students who participated in a college day program at Goldenview Baptist Church. The Choir praises the Lord through song throughout the state at various colleges and churches.

In the fall semester, the Choir sponsored its second annual Gospel Workshop which involves a weekend of seminars, and in February the Gospel Explosion is held celebrating the anniversary of the Choir. The Choir hoped that through its endeavors, it will promote better fellowship among the students of Clemson and other universities.

The JAZZ ENSEMBLE, under the direction of Dr. Richard Goodstein, was a group of student-musicians interested in learning more about the jazz Big Band medium. To join the Ensemble, a student had to audition for his or her seat and once selected, had to also participate in the Basketball Pep Band.

The Ensemble performed two formal concerts in Tillman Hall including one with the world famous United States Air Force Jazz Band, "Airmen of Note." Jazz Ensemble was offered as a one hour course as Music 363.

For those students who were interested in more serious music, the SYMPHONIC BAND provided such an outlet. Members of the Symphonic Band studied and performed concert literature from pre-Medieval to modern music, with selections from Broadway, marches, and even novelties. Instrumentation was selected to provide a well-balanced ensemble.

Under the direction of Dr. Bruce Cook, the Symphonic Band performed one formal concert in Tillman Hall and one concert in the Amphitheatre "picnic style." The band also played on tour in the Greenville, Abbeville, Columbia and Atlanta areas, and at graduation ceremonies in Littlejohn Coliseum. Symphonic Band is offered as a one hour course as Music 362.

Again, the largest and most visible, not to mention most audible, organization on campus was TIGER BAND. The conglomerate of some 260 members performed at all Tiger football games, the annual First Friday Parade, pep rallies, and Tigerama. Tiger Band is offered as a one hour course as Music 361.

Led by Drum Majors Cindy Morris and Jim McKendrick and under the direction of band director Dr. Bruce Cook and assistant band director Dr. Richard Goodstein, the 1985 version of Tiger Band had a very active year. Tiger Band had the opportunity to perform the Clemson pre-game ceremonies at Virginia Tech, perform music used in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games, purchased new marching baritones, used new fiberglass flag poles, and displayed a new huge American flag during the patriotic Homecoming show. This was also the last year for Tiger Band's uniforms, including the controversial hats. Next year's band is to have a more military look, based on a cadet-styled uniform.

Tiger Band also got to travel to Shreveport, Louisiana for the Independence Bowl and performed not only their own shows, but also one in conjuncture with the University of Minnesota band. this of course, was after a large pep rally in which both bands faced off in what was billed as a "Battle Of The Bands."

As last year the Tiger Band had the great honor to play for President Reagan while in Greenville, this year they again had a great honor by playing for Vice President George Bush. The Vice President was on campus during the ground breaking ceremony for the Strom Thurmond Institute.

HOBBY AND SPORTS

The CLEMSON UNIVERSITY BOWLING CLUB is a university sponsored organization that promotes bowling at Clemson. The club is a university team that bowls both home and away matches against other colleges in the Southeast. The team is a member of the largest collegiate bowling conference in the United States, The Southern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference (S.I.B.C.). Winners in each division of the S.I.B.C. will bowl against each other at the S.I.B.C. tournament and the winner will go to the nationals.

To be a member of the Bowling Club, you must be a full time student and maintain at least a 2.00 GPR. Since the club functions as a collegiate team, its size is limited. The club can take only seven females and seven males on away matches and it may not have more than twenty members total. For this reason, tryouts will usually be held and the lowest bowling averages will be cut from the team. Everyone is encouraged to tryout. In the past, there have been members who had never bowled before in their lives. In other words, you do not have to be a good bowler to make the team.

By being a member of the Bowling Club, you will be allowed three free games of bowling a day at the University Union. You will also get a chance to travel and compete throughout the Southeast. The club usually attends two tournaments and the travel expenses for these are paid by the club.

The SAILING CLUB, which has been in existence since 1969, is open to anyone interested in sailing, whether or not they already know how to sail. The club gives free lessons to any member and those who are properly "Checked out" have free access to the club's fleet of boats.

The club sponsors many social events such as the annual Oyster Roast, the annual Pirate Party, pig roasts, and numerous Sail Days. The club also supports an inter-collegiate racing team which competes around the country along with holding regattas here at Clemson.

The club's fleet of boats has been expanding over the last year. Dr. Chase Hunter from Anderson donated an M-Scow to the club. Also, three new Vanguard 420's were added to the fleet of six Vanguard 420's and six Coronado 15's through the University.

The CLEMSON SCUBA DIVING CLUB is a new organization on the Clemson Campus. Their diving excursions have taken them from local rivers and lakes to the shores of North and South Carolina for wreck and reef diving as well as fossil hunting in the Cooper River in Charleston. They have explored the fresh water springs of Florida to see its amazing underwater world and visit the endangered manatees. Outside dive trips, the club also teaches a variety of dive classes for novices as well as certified divers.

The WATER SKI CLUB was formed in 1979 as a sports club. Interest and expertise grew considerably over the next five years until, in the fall of 1984, the club formed the first Clemson University Water Ski Team which competed intercollegiately against other colleges and unviersities. The group quickly made a name for itself by becoming one of the top two teams in its conference, qualifying its members to ski in the 1984 Intercollegiate Water Ski Championships held in Sacramento, California. The team placed seventh in the nation at this tournament. In the spring of 1985, after attending four tournaments, seven members of the team were asked to join the South Atlantic Conference All-Star Team which competed against teams from other conferences across the country.

Presently, the Water Ski Team consists of Men's and Women's teams headed by their respective captains. "A" and "B" teams within the club are distinguished through open tryouts each semester, but the actual membership of the club is limited to twenty-five. In order to raise money and meet expenses, the club hosts a tournament each semester which is one of the four tournaments constituting a collegiate water ski season.

The CLEMSON WOMEN'S SOCCER CLUB was recognized by the university in the fall of 1984. Last year, the club went 7-5-1 over-all, playing teams in the Southeast including Georgia, Emory, North Carolina, Erskine, and Georgia Tech.

This year the club has many returning starters along with several new members to make a total of 33. The club will be playing many of the same teams as last year and will end the fall season with a tournament in Georgia. The club also enjoys having social parties, cookouts and fund-raisers.

Various activities include: tutoring for the College of Engineering, an EIT Review session and cook-out, various mixers at Edgars, and repolishing and painting bents in front of Riggs and Lowry Hall. Each year Tau Beta Pi also presents awards to an outstanding sophomore and senior from within their society.

As the Honorary Forestry fraternity, XI SIGMA PI's main purpose is to honor the students with high academic and leadership achievements. Established in 1908 at the University of Washington, the society now has 42 chapters throughout the nation's forestry schools. The Alpha Beta chapter of Clemson was chartered in 1965 with the establishment of the forestry curriculum. Charter members remaining at Clemson are: B.M. Cool, C.L. Lane, W.H.D. McGregor, L.D. Reamer, R.E. S choenike, W.A. Shain, and A.T. Shearin. Xi Sigma Pi recognizes a "scholar" from each class at Honors and Awards Day. An outstanding member is nominated each year for regional national scholarships.

Xi Sigma Pi has a dual role in acting as a service organization also. For the past several years, the members have continued to supply firewood to an elderly widow — often working in conjunction with the Forestry Club. Another shared responsibility is the Honors and Awards Day reception for guests. Xi Sigma Pi and Rho Phi Alpha alternate years on this job. The main function of Xi Sigma Pi's responsibility is the annual banquet. Arrangements for the speaker, the location and meal, and programs, all culminate in an evening of fellowship and fun for sharing the year's adventures and outstanding moments.

With a goal of providing better communications between the two groups, the IPTAY STUDENT ADVISORY BOARD was established in the fall of 1983 to act as a liaison between students and IPTAY, Clemson University's athletic scholarship club.

ISAB seeks to relay student's thoughts and opinions to IPTAY officials and to educate Clemson students about IPTAY's purpose and endeavors. By informing the two groups of each other's activities and viewpoints, ISAB acts as a unification medium between students and IPTAY.

Members of ISAB are appointed from the different classes or on merit of offices held in the University. By meeting regularly with the executive secretary of IPTAY and quarterly with the members of its Board of Directors, ISAB members are a voice for the student body to IPTAY.

The ultimate goal of SAC is to mold today's student into tomorrow's ideal alumnus.

Through its various projects, the SAC introduces students to the Alumni Association as well as providing services to Clemson University. SAC sponsors the prestigious Master Teacher Award which recognizes an outstanding educator for his or her work in the classroom. The Council also sponsors the Father of the Year Award which recognizes an outstanding "Clemson father" for all of his services to his family as well as the University. The Council also distributes "Good Stuff" boxes in the dorm rooms at the beginning of the year. Other projects include Orange Carpet Day, where the SAC encourages gifted high school students to attend Clemson, and "Senior Challenge", which involves Seniors as alumni before they graduate.

This year the Council organized the first annual Welcome Back Festival on College Avenue. Free food and door prizes were given away and WFBY was live downtown. The festival was a huge success.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

STUDENT GOVERNMENT has had a busy year. It all started in March with the election of the current administration and the appointment of committee chairpersons. Also, this year two other committees were added to Student Government, they are the Activities Committee and Junior Staff.

The Activities Committee is in charge of all of the Activities which Student Government does each year. Such events include: Expo. '85, the Homecoming Pageant, World Hunter Night, and the big Multiple Sclerosis project. Another highlight of this year was the annual Organizations Day held on Senior Walk. Approximately 70 different organizations participated in this event and helped make it a great success. The Organizations Committee did a fabulous job on this.

Two new events were sponsored this year by the Activities Committee. The first one was Expo. '85, which was a campus wide business fair. It ws a tremendous success in which 44 businesses participated and approximately 3000 students attended. The next new event sponsored under the Activities Committee was a big M.S. project inwhich Clemson competed against other major universities across the nation.

This year the Student Government also tried something new concerning the Public Relations and Communications Comittee. They began placing opinion cards around campus in order to gain more student input on certain topics. They also began conducting several open forums to which the entire student body was invited.

Another big project happening this year was the Twister Blister '85, sponsored by the Greek Liason and the P.R. and Communications Committee of Student Government. This project was an attempt to break the world record for most people to play Twister at one time and also to raise money for M.S.

Their purpose is to bring the best available speakers, personalities, etc. to the Clemson Campus. Thus, giving students exposure to a variety of ideas, perspectives, and viewpoints. The Bureau coordinates al activities involved with these events; ranging from transportation from the airport to the holding of press conferences. These speakers are always held at Tillman Hall Auditorium and are free to the public.

They held a Political Controversy series with former CIA agent, John Stockwell, and TIME News Reporter (Vietnam Coverage), Wallace Terry. Also, motivational speaker and communications specialist Jayne Lybrand came to campus in September.

the two trial courts and if an appeal is warranted, it will then be heard by the Supreme Court.

There are 14 members of the Trial Courts, 7 serve on each board, 8 are elected in the general election in the spring and 6 are appointed by the Student Body President based on interviews. The Supreme Court's five members are all appointed by the Student Body President and are required to have at least one semester's experience with the Judicial Branch. Supreme Court terms expire after two years.

The purpose of the STUDENT LEGAL ADVISORS is to provide students with someone familiar with student regulations and court procedures to serve as their legal counsel if they are charged with violations of a student regulations in court cases. There are approxiately 25-30 legal advisors each year selected through an interview process held each spring and fall. There are two chief legal advisors appointed by the Attorney General, who assign cases and handle administrative details.

The STUDENT TRAFFIC REVIEW BOARD serves the Student Body by-hearing appeals to parking tickets that are given on campus. Appeals are heard Monday through Thursday in the Student Government building.

There are nine students selected each semester to serve a year on the Board. The director of the Board is appointed by the Attorney General and along with Mr. Bill Pace, Campus Director of Parking and Traffic, and a representative from Master Planning, select the new members to the board.

SPIRIT

When the CENTRAL SPIRIT Committee was formed in 1966, its total membership was eight. Since then, this group has greatly expanded and its activities have increased. It now encompasses 16 committees and has a total membership of nearly 200.

In addition to the traditional activities of pep rallies, balloons and tiger paws, Central Spirit now administrates the homecoming displays, major spirit events, two merchandising committees, a communications committee, and eight individual committees which further the Clemson spirit in soccer, basketball and baseball.

Besides promoting spirit at home, this group annually takes to the road. This year they showed their support for the baseball and football teams as they took on the Kentucky Wildcats.

The RABBLE ROUSERS are a nonprofit organization with the sole purpose of supporting the basketball team at all home games. The club is partially supported by IPTAY. They also help the cheerleaders lead basketball fans in making noise. The Rabble Rousers also make posters and flyers advertising each game.

MILITARY

The first ANGEL FLIGHT was founded at the University of Omaha in 1952. During the spring semester of 1963, the Flying Tiger Angel Flight was organized and presented as an official organization of Clemson University at the 1964 Homecoming half-time activities.

Since its charter in 1963, the Flying Tiger Angel Flight has won awards for being the Most Improved Flight, for its activities, and for being the Outstanding Medium-sized Flight. During 1971-72 Clemson hosted the Angel Flight Area Headquarters and in 1984-85 hosted the Angel Flight National Headquarters.

In the spring of 1982, the flight's name was changed to the Major Dennis H. Sattler Angel Flight in honor of an advisor who worked diligently to get the flight going again when the membership dropped to a minimum. Since that time, Angel Flight has been recognized for the outstanding projects that the Angels have done for AFROTC, Clemson University and the surrounding community. With a current membership of 40 Angels, Angel Flight is continuing its efforts to bring the civilian community and the United States Air Force closer together.

ARNOLD AIR SOCIETY is a professional, honorary and service organization composed of Air Force ROTC cadets. They are involved with many local service projects as well as national projects. The 1985-86 national project is to support senior citizens and the on-going national project is to create awareness for the POW/MIA affair. Local service projects include a blood drive each semester for the Carolina-Georgia Blood Center, Girl Scout Day and a ball run to Columbia for the USC game. Each semester, pledges clean the Major Rudolf Anderson Jr. Memorial plane at Cleveland Park in Greenville. In the past, the squadron has hosted the Area Headquarters for the Southeastern Area and has had representatives in many national command positions.

Since its inception as a tactical component of Clemson's Army ROTC program in 1962, the Clemson Counter Guerilla platoon established a tradition of military proficiency and prestige which is carried on today by the Clemson RANGERS. Renamed the Rangers in 1976, the unit places emphasis upon physical fitness and small unit tactics, including patrolling, land navigation and military mountaineering. The Rangers take part in at least two field training exercises each semester.

In 1933, Company K, Seventh Regiment of the National Society of Scabbard and Blade was founded at Clemson University. SCABBARD AND BLADE is the nation's highest honorary military leadership society. Its purposes are to raise the standard of military education in American colleges and universities, to unite their military departments in closer relationships, to encourage and foster the qualities of good and efficient officers, and to promote friendship and good fellowship among the cadet officers. Specifically, the Clemson chapter of Scabbard and Blade sponsors the annual Military Ball and Banquet and provides ushers for football and basketball games. Election to membership may occur at the beginning of each semester during the junior and senior years and is based upon military proficiency and scholarship.

One of the oldest and most prestigious military fraternities is the National Society of Pershing Rifles. Established at Clemson in 1939, the society persists in developing the leadership abilities of its members.

Outside of athletics and band, Pershing Rifles is the only way to earn a university Block "C" letter. Members drill four days a week to keep in condition. Some of the events that they participate in include ushering football and basketball games, marching in Veterans Day, Christmas and other local parades, honor guards and weddings. Clemson's unit participates in drill competitions throughout the year including a trip to Mardi Gras. Service projects include shining the cannons in front of Tillman Hall and raising money for Muscular Distrophy in the Super Dance.

THE FOURTH REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS OF THE PERSHING RIFLES is the coordinating organization between the National Headquarters and the Southeastern District The Regional Headquarters sponsors two assemblies and a regimental drill meet for the over twenty companies in the district.

VARIETY

B-5 Social Organization was organized in 1977 as an alternative to fraternity life. B-5 consists of residents of B-5 Johnstone hall as well as non-resident members who receive a two-thirds majority vote of approval. B-5 provides activities such as theme parties, an annual Valentines' Formal, and intramural teams in softball, football, soccer, and basketball. B-5 also supports campus wide events such as The First Friday Parade, the Homecoming Pageant, the Miss Clemson Pageant, and Twister Blister.

CENTRAL DANCE/CONCERT COMMITTEE was formed several years ago when two campus committees came together under union sponsorship to provide concerts on campus. Not only do they bring major shows to Littlejohn Coliseum; they also sponsor shows in Tillman Auditorium, Edgar's Entertainment Center and outdoor shows. Members of this committee work with agents, host the performers, and provide technical assistance on the day of the show in order to bring the best in entertainment to Clemson University.

PROGRAM was established in 1982. Twenty students are selected in the spring of each year to act as peer counselors for incoming freshmen during summer orientation. The major functions fulfilled by the Clemson Ambassadors can be divided into three categories: campus resource person, group leader, and public relations representative. They in general act as guides for the freshmen during their stay here for orientation. The popularity of this group has tripled since its beginning in 1982.

The COLLEGE REPUBLICANS are the on-campus wing of the Republican Party. The group which is open to all undergraduates and graduate students, promotes Republican candidates and positions on campus. Clemson's College Republicans played an influential role in the 1984 mock election on campus in which Reagan won in a landslide. Meetings are held weekly with a variety of speakers. Several parties are also held during the school year. The organization is the largest political organization on campus and grows with each school year.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA is a national service sorority founded by eight college service organizations in 1952. All college women are eligible for membership. The main objective is service in the community. Some of the projects include Rock-a-thon for the American Cancer Society, Walk-a-thon for the March of Dimes, and local projects such as visiting Miracle Hall and Helping Hands Children's Home.

Since its founding in 1972, the UNIVERSITY UNION has provided leadership and entertainment for students. The Union consists of ten committees, an executive board, and several service areas. The Union is dedicated to providing quality entertainment for the Clemson community while training students in leadership, responsibility, and self-development. The Union's activities range from shopping trips in Atlanta to major concerts and from college bowl intramurals to Shakespeare's plays. Over 1600 programs are sponsored by the Union every year.

TAPS, the official yearbook of Clemson University, is once again being published by the Josten's Yearbook Company, after a year of publication with the Delmar Company.

The year began very slowly and on the wrong foot. While students were still moving in, someone broke in to the TAPS office and stole fourteen thousand dollars of camera equipment. The men involved are now awaiting trial. After a few tough weeks while waiting for the new equipment to arrive, plus the addition of another senior staff photographer, the photography staff is once again producing their usual, high quality work.

Other changes throughout the year occured in the framework of the Senior Staff. A new business manager and records editor was elected by November, while the position of designer remained unfilled throughout the year. With all these changes and setbacks, the young staff handled the job of publication very well.

To solicit new members, TAPS held two Drop-Ins, one during each of the semesters. A Christmas party was held to allow the staff a chance to unwind and to decorate the newly acquired tree. In the spring, the Senior Staff went to New York City for a yearbook convention, and to bring new ideas back to the yearbook.

This year, the book was enlarged by twenty pages, and now includes more graphics — as seen in the Beauties section, concerts, and twister-blister. The total production of the book has also increased to 6200 books. The year of changes came to a close with the annual spring banquet, the publication of the book, and the election of a new Senior Staff.

WSBF-FM is the student radio station of Clemson University, broadcasting as 88.1 MHz with 1000 watts of power. WSBF attempts to program what other stations do not. This attempt often translates in to a primary emphasis upon exposure for new artists, smaller record labels, public service programming, and exposure on activities, events, and issues affecting the university campus. WSBF has traditionally aired activities of special interest to the Clemson community, including live sports broadcasts, speakers, concerts, as well as acting as an information outlet for campus news and announcements.

WSBF-FM is operated by the student staff under the implicit authority of the Clemson University Board of Trustee's through the Vice President of Student Affairs. The student staff is wholly responsible for decisions regarding programming content, and has primary responsibility for the maintenance of station facilities and equipment. In many respects, the programming content is as free from administrative censorship as the school newspaper. The main restrictions under which WSBF operates are contained in FCC regulations. These restrictions include the airing of commericals, the use of obsenity, and the airing of political opinion. The organization is open to all students and poses few restrictions on either membership or the holding of office.
